Oil aboard stern will be heated and pumped out while ship's bow section is being towed out to sea to be sunk. Information Bank Thefts Baffle Gov't

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The possibility of theft from the federal government's personal information banks stored in computers in Ottawa is causing grave concern to officials, according to Privacy Commissioner Inger Hansen.

Hansen, who was attending the national freedom of information conference at UVic, said in an interview Friday that with the massive proliferation of information banks the problem has reached a crucial stage, and one for which there appears to be no ready answer.

She said a special committee of officials and computer experts has been meeting in Ottawa to try to find ways of plugging the holes. But so far they have not been able to come up with a fool-proof solution.

"The crucial question now is how to prevent theft of information and the corrupt passing of information from bank to bank and organization to organization," she said.

Hansen said that just about any information can be illegally obtained from the computer banks "if the price is right."

She said computer thefts have become a major concern in other areas, too. She has heard of fractions of interest payments to customers being syphoned off and crediting to other accounts. The money is then transferred to numbered bank accounts in Switzerland.

In most cases the customers are unaware they are being robbed because the individual amounts taken are so small. But multiply the amounts thousands-fold and it represents a huge profit.

Hansen said that at present the government has 1,500 personal information banks in Ottawa, all under the control of the Treasury Board.

About 23 of the banks are totally closed except to a handful of officials in each ministry concerned.

A provision of the Human Rights Act, passed by Parliament in July, 1977, and in effect since March 1, 1978, gives every citizen the opportunity to petition the government for release of information about themselves.

Hansen's job is to assist citizens in getting information stored in the open banks. She and her staff of three investigators have access to the closed banks too, but only for investigative purposes and on certain conditions.

Hansen said that in the first 10 months, her office handled 611 requests for assistance in getting information. She was unable to give a total number of requests denied but said 18 were turned down because the release of information might endanger national defence or security.

She said there is a tremendous onus on the government to keep the information stored in banks confidential.

Meet The Stars

Robert De Niro has gained recognition as one of the top young actors in Hollywood in a career that began in 1969 and really took off when he won the Academy Award in a supporting role for the 1974 film Godfather II.

In 1976 he was nominated best actor for Taxi Driver and also won praise for his role in the F. Scott Fitzgerald story The Last Tycoon in the same year.

His starring role in The Deerhunter in 1978 has been widely acclaimed and was probably the most demanding of the year.

De Niro is up against Sir Laurence Olivier, Gary Busey, Warren Beatty, and Jon Voight for the Academy Award.

Readers who enter the annual Victoria Times-VI90 Visit the Stars contest and correctly predict the winner, along with best actress and best movie will have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood or one of five runner-up awards.

Full details and entry form are in the advertisement on page 12.

Gromyko Trip Flaunts Treaty

Times News Services

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union, warning the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty will not bring peace to the Middle East, today dispatched Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Damascus to encourage Arab opposition to the pact.

And the official Communist Party daily Pravda said in a brief editorial, entitled "A Riposte," that the peace treaty, scheduled to be signed Monday in Washington, has already unleashed an arms race in the explosive Middle East area.

Pravda quoted U.S. news reports that the United States will sell $3 billion worth of military hardware to Israel and $2.5 billion to Egypt after the signing of the treaty.

"A parallel probably cannot be found in history when the conclusion of a peace treaty was accompanied by the unleashing of such an arms race," Pravda commented.

Meanwhile, President Anwar Sadat said on leaving Cairo for Washington that he was "happy, extremely happy" with the treaty progress.

The Egyptian leader was accompanied by his family and top Egyptian officials.

Officials said he would make a refuelling stop in the Azores then continue on his 14-hour flight to Washington.

Sadat originally planned to stop overnight in Madrid for talks with Spain's King Juan Carlos, but Egyptian officials said the trip was cancelled for security reasons.

CP Air on Even Terms

OTTAWA (UPC) — After 12 years of being relegated — officially — to the number two spot among Canadian airlines, CP Air has won the right to compete with the government-owned Air Canada on an equal footing.

The federal government Friday dropped its restrictions on CP Air to permit the carrier the right to compete with the national flag-carrier on all domestic routes.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said the Vancouver-based airline, limited to 28 per cent of the Canadian market since 1967, will be able to sell as many seats as it wishes. International flights were not affected by the 28 per cent limit.

"Appropriate steps will be taken to monitor the situation to ensure that there will not be wasteful competition between CP Air and Air Canada resulting in any significant decline in passenger load factors nor in a deterioration of service to small communities," Lang said.

In Vancouver, CP Air President Ian Gary greeted Lang's announcement with jubilation. "We are finally off the ground," he said happily.

Another CP Air spokesman said the airline plans to add more flights to its domestic schedules.

He said the airline will have to decide whether more aircraft will be purchased and what routes will see more competition.

"We have to know just what the market is before we go out and buy more airplanes," he said. "And we have to decide what routes now dominated by Air Canada are profitable."

Of CP Air's 7,000 employees, 6,300 are employed in Canada on an annual payroll of $130 million.

B.C. Planning Open Season On Arsonists

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Friday the British Columbia government will announce an arson counter-attack program next week. The program calls for police street patrols in areas most frequently hit with arson attacks, he said.

BATvan Halts 785 Vehicles

The roving BATvan was out on the streets of Saanich Friday night with police stopping 785 vehicles.

Nine motorists were given 24-hour roadside suspensions, a number of others were ticketed for offences under the Government Liquor Act, but no one was charged with impaired driving.

White Knuckle Ride? Never Like This Again

There are white-knuckle rides and there are white-knuckle rides. But Glenn Lawson's ride Friday night was something else again.

Police said Lawson, 29, of 1821 Fairfield, was riding his motorcycle down Shelbourne at about 11:30 when he was cut off by a small car carrying two men and two women.

Lawson managed to catch up to the car stopped at the light at Hillside, where he got off and approached the driver to give him a piece of his mind.

But, the spokesman said, the foursome inside locked their doors, rolled down their windows a fraction, and began to hurl abuse at him.

As Lawson walked around to the back, the driver suddenly put his car in reverse and plowed into Lawson's bike.

Infuriated, Lawson ran over and grabbed the window, whereupon the driver took off.

According to the police report, the car reached speeds of 60 to 70 miles an hour with Lawson desperately clinging onto the outside. Several times the driver smashed at Lawson's fingers to get him to release his grip.

Finally, a half mile down the road at Haultain the car pulled over and Lawson fell off.

His only injuries, the spokesman said, were two sore hands and bruised pride.

Police today are searching for the car.

Computer File Crackdown On Juveniles

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police plan a juvenile crime crackdown with a new project that will feed information on the worst delinquents into the police computer system.

Judge Doug Campbell, administrative judge for Vancouver family court, said Operation Checkpoint was created by the four judges in his court and city police.

Police and probation officers are compiling a list of about 50 juvenile delinquents for inclusion in the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC).

When Operation Checkpoint begins next month, police will have immediate access to the names and terms of bail or probation of juvenile offenders.

If police find a youth in breach of conditions set by the court, they will — on prior orders from a judge — have the authority to arrest him without a warrant.

"For all but a very few children, we have the tools to cope with reforming their behavior," Campbell said.

CPIC is needed for the small number of juveniles who need more stringent control, he said.

The information police will get through CPIC will include the youth's birthdate, and terms of bail or conditions imposed by the court.

The preliminary list of 50 juveniles for CPIC will be passed onto the Crown and each child will be the subject of a family court hearing before his name goes into the computer.

Jim Dybikowski, an executive officer of the British Columbia Civil Liberties Association, said Thursday that he has reservations about the effect of Operation Checkpoint because of "the possibility of it being used as a pretext for stopping juveniles."

He said there should be firm assurances that the information will be purged from the system once the probation or bail order is up

CLC Worth 60 NDP Seats?

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) could deliver up to 60 seats to the New Democratic Party during the next federal election, says a party document.

The document, which provides in-depth details of the CLC's plans for the next election campaign, was released at a weekend meeting of the NDP federal council by Robin Sears, national campaign director.

Under the theme, Canadian Labor Calling, the 2.3 million-member congress plans to harness its resources in a campaign to elect NDP candidates to Parliament.

The labor group's campaign will run parallel to the party's, although the two electoral efforts will be coordinated extensively.

"If the program works, the votes of trade unionists and their families can determine the outcome in more than 60 ridings across Canada," Sears writes. The party now has 17 MPs in the 264-seat Commons.

Sears mentions four stages to the CLC's campaign:

—Already labor activists are being trained in seminars across the country on how to woo their colleagues to the NDP;

—During the campaign, central phone-in offices will be established, permitting trade unionists "to be addressed in their own language, by a member of their union, on issues they care about;"

—Campaign literature designed by members of both the CLC and NDP will be mailed to local union representatives so they can become familiar with the goals of the campaign;

—"Finally, a series of one-day visits by trade union officers to priority ridings is being planned for the election itself. These visits are to include some plant gatherings, a media event, meetings with local union activists and the local party campaign."

The upcoming election is expected to cost Canadian taxpayers $52 million — 23 per cent more than an election expected a year ago — says Jean Marc Hamel, chief electoral officer.

Election costs were predicted to be about $42 million last year when "everybody expected an election," Hamel said during the taping of an interview with Standard Broadcast News scheduled for broadcast today.

The increased costs are a result partly of inflation and partly of expected increases in wages for many electoral office workers. Proposals for increases in these wages are currently before cabinet, Hamel said, and they are expected to be approved.

Riot Worst Since 1968

PARIS (UPI) — The worst riot in Paris since the 1968 student rebellion resulted in 116 police and hundreds of civilians injured, 48 rioters arrested and 10 cars burned, police said today.

Dozens of shops had their windows broken and were looted of luxury goods as 100 hooded youths belonging to a new anarchist organization disrupted a peaceful workers' parade protesting lay-offs in the steel industry.

Shopkeepers began to install new windows today and street cleaners swept up the rubbish of the fierce battle between police and the youths, who had no connection with the workers' parade.

The riot was the most spectacular in Paris since the May, 1968, student "revolution." The "Autonome Brigades" anarchist group claimed responsibility for the riot in a communique to news agencies.

About 100 anarchists, most wearing motorcycle helmets, began clashing with riot police as the steel-workers' march ended at the historic Place de l'Opera, which quickly filled with clouds of tear gas fired by the police.

Waving black and red flags, they charged down the elegant boulevards Montmartre, des Italiens and Poissonniere as they lobbed gasoline bombs at police, set fire to three cars and overturned scores of others.

They reportedly broke 103 windows in the luxury shops lining the boulevards, grabbing expensive perfumes, leather goods and television sets from the shops and leaving behind a path of rubbish, overturned barricades and broken glass.

Ali Bhutto Loses Final Court Fight

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, deposed prime minister of Pakistan, today lost the last court battle to overturn his death sentence, leaving his fate in the hands of the general who has refused clemency to almost 400 condemned murderers since ousting him.

However, the judges included a paragraph in their ruling recommending clemency. Seizing on this paragraph, Bhutto's lawyer, Yahya Bakhtiar, said: "The death sentence is out. I feel relieved. But I am disappointed in the rest of the judgment. Mr. Bhutto should not be hanged after this."

In suggesting clemency, the judges said they supported Bakhtiar's claim that the sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment because Bhutto did not wield the murder weapon and was not at the scene of the crime.

Talks Tuesday In Woods Row

For the first time in a week things were quiet today in the Queen Charlotte Islands fisheries-logging war.

The lull is expected to last until at least Tuesday, when fisheries officials from Ottawa and forestry representatives from Victoria are scheduled to meet in Vancouver.

So far 15 loggers and a company representative from Q.C. Timber Ltd. have been arrested by fisheries officers in the battle over a 40-acre tract of timber along Riley Creek, a salmon stream on the west coast of the Charlottes.

The first arrest came last Monday, and additional charges have been laid daily. On Friday eight fallers were arrested as they began work in the timber that was put off limits by the federal fisheries department about two weeks ago.

Arrests have come so frequently during the week that it has been hard to keep a count on the numbers charged. A company official said that as of today the total stands at 16.

He said he thought it unlikely any loggers would go into the site before Tuesday now that high-level talks have been scheduled.

"But that's up to the loggers," he added.

Meanwhile, the Sierra Club has asked Forest Minister Tom Waterland to order a moratorium in the disputed watershed.

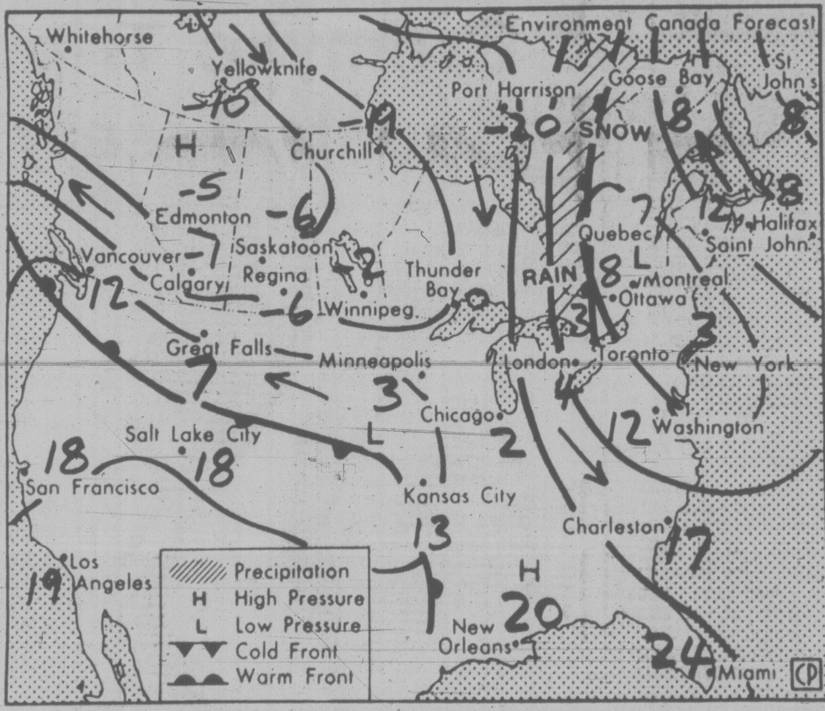

Map valid until noon Sunday

While a broad ridge of high pressure lies offshore a weak weather system lying across Vancouver Island and extending over the central interior continues moving southeast. This system will pass into Washington State today. Clearing has been reported from a number of B.C. localities although cloud is occurring at a number of places on the coast as well as over the interior. Today isolated precipitation is forecast over the interior mainly near the continental divide. An improving trend will follow in the wake of this system although temperatures will be somewhat cooler.

ASNER
. . . fun in the Sun

'Editor' Asner Runs by Nuns

"Lou Grant's" first day as senior city editor of the Toronto Sun wasn't all fun. First, a columnist for the morning tabloid welcomed his temporary superior by calling him a "failed broadcast turkey" in print. And he had to run through a line of chanting nuns demonstrating outside the Sun building, objecting to stories the paper has carried about their order. But things then went more smoothly for Grant, in reality actor Ed Asner, star of Lou Grant, a television program in which he plays the city editor of the fictional "Los Angeles Tribune." In Toronto to make a movie, he was hired lightheartedly for the day by the Sun.

Talking about movies, the women's activist group that declared budding movie actress Margaret Trudeau mother of the year demonstrated on Parliament Hill Friday and — paraphrasing Margaret — declared they don't want to be roses in the government's lapel. The "Wages for Housework" group, praising Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's estranged wife for her courage to speak out when she felt oppressed, dropped two roses and a few daisies into the Centennial Flame on Parliament Hill. " "She didn't simply want to be a rose in her husband's lapel, said Judith Ramirez. "Now we want to convince the government not to treat us (housewives) like roses in its lapel."

A bad connection and the fear the telephone may be tapped took much of the joy out of Pfc. Robert Garwood's first conversation with his father since disappearing in Vietnam 13½ years ago. "He said practically nothing — like he was scared to talk," Jack Garwood said Friday in Greensburg, Ind., after speaking to his son over a military line. The younger Garwood has been charged with desertion and collaboration, but his father says his son, 33, will be cleared. "The kid has never done anything that wrong. He should be spanked."

Meanwhile, U.S. President Jimmy Carter is among this year's Nobel Peace Prize candidates, the director of the Nobel Institute said today. As one of the 1978 nominees he is automatically among this year's candidates.

A candidate is what former Burnaby MP John Reynolds, says he won't be in the forthcoming federal election. Reynolds, now host of a radio talk show, said Friday he had turned down a request by Conservative leader Joe Clark to seek nomination in a Vancouver riding, for family reasons.

An Oakland, Calif., jury that has already deliberated for 18 hours during three days is trying again to reach a verdict in the Huey Newton murder trial. "This jury will be hung from here to eternity," an agitated Newton said Friday night. "And I will bet you a bottle of your favorite liquor I'll get tried again."

Although actor Burt Lancaster wasn't betting, he was hoping no one would recognize him this week. Partly disguised by a beard, Lancaster was in the hard coal region of Pennsylvania doing research for a new movie.

Back across the border, Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richards will perform his benefit concert for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind at Oshawa Civic Centre April 22, promoters and a spokesman for the centre said Friday. Plans to hold the concert in Toronto's 5,500-seat Varsity Arena were scrapped when the city's building department refused approval.

Manitoba Lt.-Gov. F. L. (Bud) Jobin and his wife were to leave tonight for a three-week European trip that includes audiences of a different kind — with the Queen and Pope John Paul II. When Jobin visits Windsor Castle April 10, he plans to present the Queen with a painting of this year's solar eclipse by Manitoba artist Jackson Beardy.

And for those who've been wondering, Elvis Presley left an estate valued at $7.6 million, according to an accounting approved Friday by a Tennessee probate court judge. Presley left the bulk of his estate to his 10-year-old daughter Lisa Marie to his father Vernon and to his grandmother Minnie Mae.

Letelier Murderers Get Life

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a judgment that provoked defiant screaming in the court, a federal judge Friday sentenced two Cuban exiles to life in prison for the "monstrous and cold blooded" murder of Chilean diplomat Orlando Letelier.

Guillermo Novo and Alvin Ross Diaz yelled "Viva Cuba Libre!" — Long Live Free Cuba — as they were led away from the court room. Their anti-Castro supporters responded with screams and shouts.

Most were in Spanish. But as U.S. marshals cleared the court, one woman hollered, "Wake up America! Today we suffer, maybe tomorrow you will suffer from Communist governments!"

District Judge Barrington Parker also sentenced Ignacio Novo, Guillermo's brother, to eight years in prison as an accomplice.

Parker said he had never presided over trial of a crime "as monstrous and as cold-blooded as the one committed on the morning of Sept. 21, 1976."

He said he sympathized with their feelings as fugitives from tyranny but added, "You have smuggled in a brand of terrorism, fanaticism and hate that has no place in this country."

The three men were convicted Feb. 14.

Bakhtiar Sends Taped Warning

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Former premier Shahpour Bakhtiar sent a tape-recorded message today to show that he is still alive and to warn against an Islamic republic planned for Iran.

His New Year's message to the Iranian people was delivered to the Agence France-Presse bureau here today with a hand-written letter on paper bearing the letterhead of Claridge's Hotel in London.

(A hotel spokesman said Bakhtiar was not known to have been at the hotel recently and is not there now.)

Bakhtiar fled as supporters of Shiite Moslem leader Ayatollah Khomeini seized power Feb. 11. He was rumored to have been killed or to have been captured.

Events since then have shown that he was right to predict a dark future for Iran if his government fell, said the tape-recording that sounded like Bakhtiar's voice.

"What I see now on the horizon does not at all resemble freedom, democracy, economic progress and development of the national culture. We have replaced an aged, corrupt dictatorship with a dictatorship accompanied by anarchy," the message said.

Bakhtiar was the last premier in Iran before the shah's departure from the country.

Kurdish rebels, meanwhile, got an offer of limited autonomy today after several days of fighting, but Khomeini's peacemaker said the army won't free 97 Kurdish hostages until the guerrillas give up the radio-TV station and airport in Sanandaj, 400 kilometres west of Tehran.

Reliable sources said 16 of the youngest hostages were freed Friday. Ninety-seven remain in an army barracks and hundreds of Kurds gathered around the garrison today awaiting their release.

The townspeople held tearful reunions with Kurdish soldier-relatives they had not seen for days. They also dived for cover when Iranian troops fired into the air to push the crowd back temporarily.

Kurdish leaders said the autonomy offer was made Friday by Interior Minister Seyyed Javadi, who accompanied Khomeini's peace envoy, Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani, to the Kurdistan capital to keep the revolt from spreading to the rest of the region's four million people.

John Davies is helping us find something that took 300 years to lose.

Every year in B.C., hundreds of artifacts are discovered and sent to the B.C. Provincial Museum in Victoria.

Unfortunately, because many of the pieces have been lost or neglected for hundreds of years, they need careful cleaning and restoration to bring them back to life.

That's the job of people like John Davies—a technician with the museum's Conservation Division. To him an artifact isn't just another Indian mask—it's a tangible part of our past that must be carefully pieced together and preserved to help show us where we've been. And help tell us where we're going.

John Davies is only one of the more than 43,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union working for you all over the Province.

At all kinds of jobs.

Under all kinds of working conditions.

All people whose skill, experience and dedication have made our provincial public employees among the most efficient anywhere in North America today. And that's something to be proud of.

Freedom of information

Secretary of State John Roberts unveiled yesterday the Liberals' policy on so-called "freedom of information." The policy is, it must be admitted, a bit of an improvement over the first Green Paper the government put forward 18 months ago.

All the same, it's just as easy to interpret even the new proposals as a series of regulations designed to ensure that the government has to give citizens as little information as possible rather than a true freedom-of-information law. The list of exemptions proposed is so extensive that any cabinet minister with a spark of ingenuity could find a way to use it to get round disclosing anything that might be politically embarrassing.

Take, for instance, the first exemption — one that allows the government to withhold any information in cases where its disclosure might damage international relations, national security or federal-provincial relations. Nearly everyone agrees that delicate military and diplomatic secrets should be withheld, but the inclusion of the federal-provincial relations sections makes the exemption absurd.

In the current climate, practically anything has the potential to damage relations between the two levels of government. For example, a federal report stating that a provincial program set up under a cost-sharing formula was a tremendous waste of money would doubtless not improve relations between that province and Ottawa. But does that mean it should be allowed to remain confidential?

If that isn't enough, the government is proposing another eight categories of information that would also be exempt. Some of them are reasonable enough — information on cabinet deliberations, information that would prejudice ongoing police investigations, information that would invade citizens' privacy.

But others are so vague and general that the government could use them to withhold practically any information. Perhaps the worst example is a proposal that any opinions or advice "of a subjective nature" given the government could be withheld. Presumably that could mean that such information as a consultant's study recommending that certain chemicals be banned because of a health risk could be kept secret on the grounds it contained subjective recommendations.

The other key issue in the freedom-of-information controversy is the question of who should have the final say over whether specific pieces of information should be disclosed. Many freedom-of-information advocates say the final decision should belong to the courts.

However, Roberts argued against this, proposing instead an Information Commissioner who would report directly to Parliament rather than to any ministry of government. For each contentious question to be taken to court would be too expensive and time-consuming and would go against long-held parliamentary traditions, he argued.

Those who support court review argue, however, that an information commissioner would end up essentially as a government appointee and would not be perceived as impartial enough to have his decisions accepted.

In this argument, there is some merit on both sides. Perhaps some compromise could be reached if Ottawa appointed an information commissioner through the same process B.C. used in appointing its ombudsman. The key part of this process is the requirement that the appointee be endorsed unanimously by members of an all-party committee, thus prohibiting any political appointee from getting the job.

All the same, it wouldn't much matter who made the final decisions if the exemption list were to be as broad as the one the Liberals now are proposing. Anybody would have to say that nearly any delicate information could be withheld under at least one of those sections.

The government's policy on freedom of information may be improving, but it's still got a long way to go.

Why the interruptions?

The provincial government's timing in calling the legislature back into session is puzzling. On the one hand, Premier Bill Bennett made MLAs wait until nearly three months into the year before scheduling a spring session — one of the latest starts in years.

On the other hand, almost immediately the government has scheduled a two-day recess so Social Credit members can attend a party "mini-convention" in Kamloops, followed by the Easter long weekend and two more days when the legislature won't sit.

And the premier himself could manage to attend only the ceremonial reading of the throne speech. He'll be absent from Victoria until Thursday next week.

It is not unprecedented for the legislature to adjourn so MLAs may attend their party conventions; there has been a gentleman's agreement on the matter in the past. But these were the important annual conventions of the parties, where new policies and past performance were debated.

The Kamloops confab for which the legislature is being adjourned is just one in a series of regional Socred get-togethers that have been staged during the winter months. This one is shaping up as no more spectacular or unusual than all the others, except that the premier is inflating it into a grandiose affair. But it certainly doesn't justify holding up the province's business for two days.

Why wait so late in the year to call the legislature into session only to interrupt it immediately? One explanation may be — as the meagre throne speech indicates — that the government's legislative schedule is so thin, it needs all the interruptions it can manufacture to pad things out.

Canada keeps mum on Iran

OTTAWA — At a recent meeting of the Commons external affairs committee, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson was asked to state Canada's attitude toward the "barbaric" treatment of opponents of the new regime in Iran.

He replied that it is far too early to determine the revolutionary regime's approach to human rights. Under Islamic law, which the new order has embraced, a different approach to barbarity was taken than under Anglo-Saxon law.

It was entirely up to the individual country to decide its system of laws and the punitive measures it will use to enforce them.

Jamieson's position is hard to challenge, legally and diplomatically.

Parallel government

It leaves something to be desired in humanitarian terms — in [illegible] of an adequate response to the reign of terror loosed on the Iranian people by followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the religious leader who engineered the shah's downfall.

A deafening silence prevails in western capitals with respect to the crimes being committed in Iran in the name of revolutionary justice.

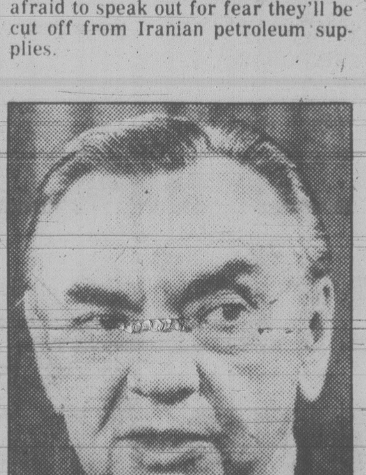
The number of people shot after kangaroo-type trials had risen, as of a recent day, to 68. And that accounts only for the officially-announced executions; nobody knows how many Iranians have fallen victim to a private settling of political scores.

Even the Khomeini-appointed prime minister, Mehdi Bazargan, has taken to complaining about the "loss of face" suffered by his government because of the excesses of the revolutionary committees. (Bazargan's complaint has now brought an end, at least temporarily, to summary trials by revolutionary courts.)

His position has been made almost intolerable by the parallel government maintained by Khomeini in the "holy city" of Qom, a goverment which knows how to use the kind of authoritdy that flows from the barrel of a gun.

Officially, the thundering silence in western countries about the gross violation of human rights in Iran goes by the name of non-intervention.

However, it's possible to suspect that it is not entirely unrelated to a substance called oil. Countries are afraid to speak out for fear they'll be cut off from Iranian petroleum supplies.



DON JAMIESON
. . . protecting Israeli interests

In Canada's case, an additional consideration is in play. Last month, after Iran broke diplomatic relations with Israel, Canada agreed to undertake the protection of Israeli interests in the Moslem country.

It did so at Israel's request, and with the concurrence of the Iranian government. In the same way, Iran's interests in Israel are to be protected by Switzerland.

Jamieson describes it as a "perfectly normal kind of diplomatic activity," and says he does not think it will have any serious impact on the "even-handedness" of Canada's Middle East role.

He says it will chiefly involve catering to the interests of Israeli nations, the issuance of visas, "that sort of thing."

In view of the anti-Israeli stance already taken by the revolutionary government, nevertheless, some observers here have expressed disquiet about the implications of the protection role assumed by Canada.

Although the shah did not go out of his way to advertise the fact, Israeli businessmen had a number of contracts in pre-revolutionary Iran, and a substantial number of Israeli experts were engaged on privately-negotiated development projects, especially in agriculture and land reclamation.

Bland assessment

The better the relations Canada can maintain with the revolutionary government the better chance, presumably, the Canadian embassy in Tehran will have to protect Israeli nationals and their property effectively, and perhaps also to serve as a channel for claims on cancelled contracts.

That would help explain the great care Canada has taken not to be provocative and to keep a low profile, antagonizing nobody. In a 10-page survey of issues in Canadian foreign policy specially prepared for the Commons committee, Jamieson devoted only one brief paragraph to the tumultuous, world-shaking developments in Iran.

"Recent events in Iran have had a serious destabilizing effect on the region," it said blandly. "Canada's concern has been to protect its citizens and to seek to develop effective working relations with the new government which Canada recognized on Feb. 16."

Victoria School Board: Signs of Improvement

Four months after last fall's civic elections, it now is time to take a look at the performance of some of Greater Victoria's elected bodies. Newly-elected officials have had time to learn the ropes, and boards and councils as a whole have had time to adjust to changes caused by different compositions.

It seems appropriate to begin with the Greater Victoria school board because that is surely the body that has changed the most radically since 1978. The board has been loosely divided into two factions for a couple of years and with the November elections, the balance of power shifted from one faction (the so-called budget balancers) to the other (the so-called proponents of educational quality).

With the shift in power came predictions of disaster from supporters of the defeated group. And for the first two months of 1979, it seemed they might be right — but not for the reasons they had stated. They believed the disaster would come because the new majority would spend the taxpayers' money like their kindergarten pupils let loose in the toyshop. Instead, it nearly came because the board got so bogged down in in-fighting that nothing was happening at all.

Nearly every vote ended up five to four, divided strictly along factional lines. The minority of four (Susan Brice, Mark Fisher, Glyn Williams and Peter Yorke) found that they might not be able to win any votes, but they certainly could slow things down so much that the majority couldn't do much either. They insisted on tedious, detailed debate of the simplest matters on the agenda. They asked dozens of questions that required complex, technical answers from school district administrators. On occasion they let the discussion deteriorate to an unpleasantly personal level.

Not surprisingly, the new majority fell into the trap with a dull thud. Less than a month after the new board had taken over, the faction of five, led by chairman Carol Pickup and vice-chairman Martin Levin, were proposing motions of closure to try to limit the seemingly endless debates.

The minority came roaring back with shrieks about the end of democracy and the stage was set for battle. Even superintendent Allan Stables became concerned that so little progress was being made that administrators were being forced to make decisions that should be made by the trustees.

In the last couple of weeks, however, some reasons for optimism about the board's future seem to be developing. The feelings of acrimony appear to be diminishing a little, to be replaced, on occasion, by almost good-natured banter and teasing among the factions. A little grudging respect seems to have developed for the abilities of "the other side," even if basic philosophic disagreements remain.

The voting is no longer running so strictly on five-four lines. The newly-elected trustees, Levin and Win Mott, sometimes join with the minority to make it the majority, especially on issues of maintaining and raising educational standards. Fisher (who has announced his intention to seek the Victoria NDP nomination in the next provincial election) sometimes votes with the majority (which includes several prominent members of the local NDP).

In its best moments, the board now displays an attitude conducive to first-rate debate on the key educational issues of the day. In moderate, well-reasoned terms, the trustees discuss the principles and goals of good education — a welcome change from other years when almost all the debate seemed to centre on ways to save money.

However, the board still has some way to go before those best moments become the general standard. Debate still tends to be much too lengthy: the board has yet to finish a meeting within five hours, and has been known to spend as much as an hour discussing a motion that everyone agreed with. Trustees still tend to use meetings to debate technical matters and details of wording that could be better and more efficiently handled in some other forum.

And when issues concerned with budgetary matters rather than educational standards arise, both groups retreat into defensiveness, personal attack and hostility.

The new majority has not been shovelling money off the back of a truck, but it has increased spending beyond what the minority thinks is reasonable. That has somehow become a symbol for all the philosophic differences between the two groups.

If the trustees could learn to approach financial matters with the same attitude they are beginning to take to educational matters, Victoria would be on the way to having a good school board, reflecting the diverse views of the community and dealing with them rationally. — B.McL.

System's a sham

Concerning the letter written by Stewart Schoen on March 12 (A Cruel Joke), I would like to substantiate his findings regarding the Canada Manpower referral system.

I have on occasion found it necessary to use the referral system to my dismay. On three separate occasions I took the time to go out to see my prospective employer in person rather than phoning so I could present myself properly. Each time I was told by the prospective employer that the job I was applying for had already been filled (as much as six weeks previous, in one instance).

I presented these facts to Canada Manpower and they said that it is up to each client to notify Canada Manpower if they got the job or not. My claim is that Canada Manpower should be responsible for following up the results of the referral in order to keep them current.

There is also another unfair tactic by Canada Manpower regarding exploratory grants. This grant was devised to financially aid job seekers looking for work in another city or province because there were no jobs locally.

I first enquired about this grant and was told flatly by the receptionist that I had to have a job interview set up in the city I was intending to travel to, to be eligible for the Canada Manpower exploratory grant.

The fact is however, that if you are insistent enough Canada Manpower will teletype the city you are intending to travel to to find out if there are job prospects in your field.

This sometimes only takes a few hours (usually the same day) and if there are openings there you qualify for the exploratory grant immediately.

It's about time the unemployed got a decent break from this type of sham and the Canada Manpower system be accountable to the people. — Wayne C. Mott, 945 Scotia Street.

We love a parade

I wish to refer to the lamentations of one Mrs. G. Osborne in Max Low's column on March 17, regarding the Victorian Celebrations Society.

To listen to her "truth" of the matter, one would think that the only parades happened in 1977 and 1978 when, in truth, there have been many. And, no matter who is chairman or president of the society, the real credit for the success of the parade belongs to the parade marshals and back-up staff of hard-working committee members and the office staff who handle the millions of details. By the way, in 1977 when all the commonwealth was celebrating the Queen's Silver Jubilee, guess whose parade missed the golden opportunity of having the monarch's Silver Jubilee as the Victoria Day parade theme.

As a one-time member of VCS, I would like to note here that while Mr. Osborne was "at the helm" three good vice-presidents and three directors resigned. The fact that Ms. Beirnes and Mr. Houghton were "elected" proves that the previous status was not as rosy and satisfactory as Mrs. Osborne would have us believe.

It's significant to note that the former secretary of VCS (who has been the capable, hard-working, unsung backbone of the organization — no matter what its name — responsible for the Victoria Day parade and other events for the past eight years) is now with the newly-formed Greater Victoria Festival Society.

The Greater Victoria Festival Society has responsibly agreed to assume the $12,000 debt. It's interesting to note that the VCS, despite the injection of $20,000 in assets of the original Victorian Days Society upon it merging with the original G. V. Celebrations Association in October 1976, plus all the other annual grants, still managed to run up this $12,000 debt! — Ruth Jardine, 219-1680 Poplar Street.

China letting genie out of bottle?

By ADRIAN HAMILTON
London Observer

Rapid industrialization creating strains

"It was anarchy," said the director of the Shanghai car works, describing life in his factory under the Gang of Four five years ago. "Workers turned up late and went home early. Affairs were run by a revolutionary committee which was not interested in skills or organizations." What he then went on to admit was that he, the deputy director and most of the present management were also members of that same revolutionary committee, now abolished.

Change and continuity is always difficult to estimate in China, never more so than at this time when the country is embarked on an economic modernization program of unprecedented magnitude, and increasingly problematic implications.

Reconsider

Two weeks ago, on the day British Industry Secretary Eric Varley arrived in Peking to negotiate a $14 billion economic co-operation agreement, the People's Daily came out with a highly significant editorial urging the need for second thoughts about China's ambitious modernization program, launched only two years ago.

The timing was accidental. The message was clear enough. While the West has seen in the opening up of China an almost limitless market for its goods, the Chinese leadership is having to grapple with the hard realities of a new economic policy that is crucial to the survival of the present regime and its relations with the West.

The newspaper editorial, and the evidence of Varley's negotiations themselves, demonstrates that they are having to reconsider many of their first assumptions.

With their program of the Four Modernizations — military, agricultural, industrial and in science and technology — Vice-Premier Deng Xiaoping and his septuagenarian colleagues are aiming at making China a "front rank" economic power by the end of the century.

It is not only the scale of the enterprise that staggers. China has a population of nearly a billion, 80 per cent of them peasants. The government is implicitly — and, in the deliberate comparison with European incomes and the dramatic opening up of the country to Western films, television and travel, to some extent explicitly — promising people a visible transformation of living standards within a generation.

It is also the manner in which they are seeking this goal. For 30 years China has been held up around the world as the shining example of a diffused system of economic growth, based on gradual improvements in agriculture throughout the country, centred on self-reliant local communities and organized through tight party disciplines.

Now the regime is furiously setting about a radical departure from this policy, seeking rapid industrialization through investment in a series of major plants or growth points in the economy; stressing specialization and rapid returns instead of improvement across the whole front; reintroducing incentives and wage differentials at the expense of an even distribution of the benefit.

You can see the strength of the propaganda exercise behind this change in the newspapers. Every day there are editorials criticizing attempts to develop coal production in the southern regions when the country would have been better to have placed its efforts in the north, where the reserves are. Articles describe different agricultural yields in the world, pointing how good the U.S. and European performance is and, by inference, how bad the Russian. The need to be pragmatic, to achieve greater crop specialization and a wider range of consumer goods, and to learn from abroad, is drummed in unendingly.

Enthusiasm

Even more striking is the very real enthusiasm of the experts and officials of the ministeries, at both central and regional level, for the changes and the opportunities opened up. Over the past year China has received more than 70 trade and technical missions from abroad and sent out as many as 50 of its own around Europe, America and Japan. This year the figures could be double. To talk to them is like talking to the young technocrats of Brazil or the new state industries of Europe — there is the same enormous enthusiasm for technology, the sense of the market opportunity and the thirst for Western knowledge and success.

Far from justifying a reputation for deviousness or great subtlety, Chinese officials and managers are remarkably open about their problems. "You will see," the director says at the start of each factory visit, "how poor most of our equipment is. Please give us your criticisms and suggestions at the end of the tour."

Going around any plant or mine (and the Chinese have now shown Westerners a surprising proportion of their plants) reveals not so much a shortage of skills as equipment 20 to 30 years out of date and low productivity. The Shanghai car works supplies the basic saloon car for all China (there is another plant in the north, but it provides immense black limousines, curtained and chromed, for "important dignatories"). Yet, with a workforce of over 2,000, it produces only some 4,000 cars and 3,000 light trucks a year.

Some of the individual machine tools are quite good. The individual skills and training of operatives, welders and panel beaters is excellent. But there is a lack of multi-purpose tools, shortcomings in components and materials and an obvious lack of workflow organization. The final assembly line literally inches along as whole teams of workers scramble over the cars filing down edges and banging in projections. "The cars should never get on to the line in that state," commented a car industry expert. It makes for quality, not productivity, which is why the regional authorities are negotiating with half a dozen foreign companies to see if they will undertake a modernization program.

The opportunities for radical improvements in the Chinese economy are mind-boggling in a country that depends on steam trains for the great majority of its internal transport, relies on village pits for a third of its coal production and has no real grid systems to match its power station production with its electricity needs.

What is now making China's leaders rethink their objectives is the growing awareness of the strains of so rapid a modernization.

The most visible constraint is finance. China has so far proved a model of international financial decorum as far as its foreign debts are concerned. But it is impossible to conceive how it can achieve its next leap forward without a heavy reliance on debt.

The total cost of the 120 major projects listed in the industrial modernization has been variously estimated at anything from 600 to 1,000 billion dollars. Yet the maximum foreign debt that China is likely to let itself incur is probably nearer $30-50 billion. Something has to give and, in the Chinese case, it is likely to be the pace of investment. "You keep saying that you can provide credit," Li Xiannin, the financial boss in China's top leadership, told Varley. "But we are worried about how we can repay it."

The West may feel that China is being ultra-cautious in its borrowing policy, but clearly its leadership sees fiscal conservatism as essential not only for financial reasons but also to avoid too heavy a reliance on the West. "Quite right too," muttered a businessman accompanying Varley's mission. "Why should they learn our evil ways?"

Solid base

The banking problem, however, is only a reflection of the general difficulties of too rapid a pace of investment. China obviously has the manpower. The last 20 years, although somewhat decried by the present leadership, has given it a fairly solid base for an industrial take-off. It has shown, according to Western companies working there, a remarkable ability to pick up skills.

One British concern was horrified a few years ago when, on the final day of installation of a complicated piece of machinery, its engineers were dragged out to watch a host of Chinese with spanners take it all to pieces. Visions of broken warranties, damaged parts and non-payment flashed through their minds. But, with only a few requests for advice, the Chinese took it to pieces and put it together again. It has been working ever since.

The lack is in middle management, engineers and designers — the people who were most abused during the Cultural Revolution and its aftermath. "We desperately require economists," one of China's leaders told a British banker recently. "We'd only be too happy to send you those," the banker replied. What it turned out the Chinese meant was accountants, computer operators and such like.

China, too, undoubtedly has raw material resources. The country has immense reserves of coal, something like a tenth of the world's reserves of tin and some 7 per cent of the world's reserves of iron. It is not short of lead, zinc or nickel and it has considerable, though as yet unexplored, prospects for oil.

Take years

But none of these are yet developed to a point where sufficient exports can be generated to pay for the kind of major expansion schemes now envisaged. It is all very well talking of ultimate reserves. But each project, often in remote areas short of water and labor, will require the construction of an extensive infrastructure of transport, materials and people to serve it. It will take years to develop and, in the end, may not produce enough to supply both the domestic demand encouraged by industrialization and the exports to service the debt.

It is this problem of managing domestic demand that may yet prove the most difficult. China hasn't the resources to achieve all its four modernizations at the same time: to improve its military technology (there is a good deal of evidence from Chinese discussions with Western companies on minerals, aircraft, electronics and ships that this remains a dominating motive behind present policy) as well as its agriculture, its industry and its science base.

The current concentration on manufacturing seriously risks widening the already big gap between the peasant majority in the country and the urban elite. The emphasis on large projects stands to increase the problems of light industry if the one proceeds too far ahead of the other.

More sensitively still, the opening up of China to foreign influence and the reintroduction of concepts of incentive and differentials, which the leadership has encouraged to overcome the problems of bureaucratic inertia, may yet let a genie out of the bottle that will be impossible to control.

ASAP's fable and the hurry-up call

When this column stumbled on the stage, a question was posed to readers: When you want somebody to call you back in a hurry, but you do not want to alarm them with fears of a medical emergency, what word do you use?

"Urgent" is too strong a word; besides, its overuse leaves nothing available in case of a genuine emergency. For example, the French Embassy in Washington sends out all its press releases marked "urgent" — even to pass on the dreary information that "government will spur growth," as if growth were a horse. The French ambassador should ponder Talleyrand's advice to diplomats: "Above all, not too much zeal."

"Pressing" is the word suggested by one reader, presumably a tailor. Another claims that "mini-emergency" works without striking fear, and an airline executive suggests "without fail." A gentle soul suggests, "When he has a chance, please have him call me back," which never works for me. A former government official offers, "Please expedite response," and a puckish attorney gets results with "with all deliberate speed."

One Penelope K. Amabile, who describes herself as a "barnstormer, balloonist and adventurer," uses "or else" on her phone messages — return her call "or else."

Since many phone messages are now left on a recording following a beep, some readers report they use a bit of vigorish in their tone of voice. "Very important," normally banal, can be delivered on a recorded message-taker with weight, sexiness and mystery. Sondra Langford of Chatham, N.J., has this dramatic technique: "I can move my friends to return a call quickly by stating my name and phone number, and no more, in a weak voice." The implicit message: Call before it is too late.

The word, or acronym, that was suggested most frequently was "ASAP" — "as soon as possible." "Soonest," a term from telegraphese, was another favorite.

Max Frankel, editor of The New York Times editorial page (which appears regularly opposite the Op-Ed page), adds a note of poignancy: "In emergencies, I say I am anxious. Otherwise, I say I am eager. Preserving the distinction is one of my personal, losing causes."

SUPERFLACK

Sometimes it takes a great press agent to come up with the perfect word. In Washington, Joe Laitin is one of the veteran press agents who work under various titles as administrations come and go, always landing on his feet because he has that certain touch with words. When the astronauts, circling the moon on Christmas Eve, moved mankind with a reading from Genesis in the Bible — that was Joe, operating on the global scale.

BLUMENTHAL . . . transgressions

Now he works for Treasury Secretary Mike Blumenthal. He had been urging his client to travel to China, where Blumenthal had spent eight years as a youth. "Shanghai is your log cabin," Joe told him. So Blumenthal recently made his sentimental journey, accompanied by a dozen reporters who dutifully reported the secretary's trade negotiations.

The word chosen by Blumenthal in China to describe the Chinese move across its Vietnamese border was "transgression." I had not heard that word used since Negley Farson's The Way of a Transgressor," a memoir of a foreign correspondent first published in 1935.

"Transgression" means "movement across a line," whether actually moving across a border or figuratively stepping beyond the bound[illegible] more accurate word for the Chinese action is "aggression," which also has the meaning of stepping across a line (the "gress," or grade, means "step") but carries the connotation of attack. In international law, aggression is condemned, and the use of that word by Blumenthal would have been considered insulting.

When the perfect choice — "transgression" — came over the wires from China, I asked, "Who's with Blumenthal?" Answer: Joe Laiten. It figured. I shot a message to Joe in Peking about the word, and received this message back from him: "I accept brickbats but not bouquets. The word is Secretary Blumenthal's." Always a pleasure dealing with a pro.

ALL PRO

A decade ago, people were "pro-abortion" or "anti-abortion." Now the debate is between people who are "pro-life" or "pro-choice." What brought about this double switch in sloganeering?

After the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision prohibiting states from making abortion illegal early in pregnancy, opponents of abortion reached for a handle that would not be considered negative. A good example was available in the generation-old movement to oppose the union shop, which called itself "right-to-work" rather than "anti-union." On that analogy, "anti-abortion" became "right-to-life," and later, to save valuable bumper-sticker space, "pro-life." (Nellie Gray, president of March for Life, popularized the latter; she has also been pushing "preborn" rather than "unborn" in order to state more positively the living nature of the unborn child, seeking the analogy of "prenatal.")

Supporters of the campaign to strike down laws prohibiting abortion were caught by surprise at the strong reaction to their court victory, and were flummoxed by the powerful "pro-life" slogan.

They could hardly march under banners proclaiming themselves to be "anti-life"; an even more negative and unacceptable [illegible] was "pro-death." How could people who were in favor of legal abortion put forward their position positively and punchily?

Here's how, as they say in the ad game: The Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights picked up the idea of "rights" from their opponents; they combined it with an old anti-integration slogan ("freedom of choice") and put forward "right-to-choose." The message in this slogan reached beyond those who already favored legal abortion and appealed to many who had not yet made up their minds. Then, as "right-to-life" became "pro-life," "right-to-choose" followed right along with "pro-choice."

So now we have two equally loaded phrases encapsulating the opposing views: "pro-life," which implicitly derogates all those who disagree as killers, and "pro-choice," which implicitly derogates all those who disagree as dictators. A matched pair of pistols for a bitter duel.

Thumping for owls

"Who's that?"

I almost said "Me" but caught myself just in time. After all, it wouldn't do to be caught conversing with an owl, would it? Besides, the owl hadn't said "Who's that" Who's that was what I read into the expression on its face.

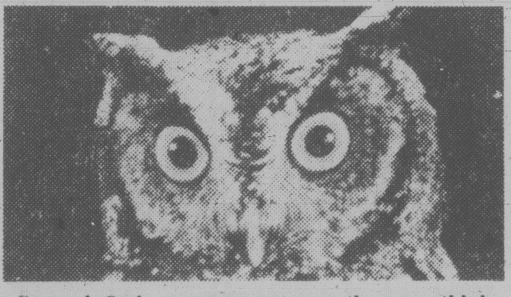
I had just "thumped" a big old maple with a handy broken limb. It was a solid bit of limb and it made a good solid "thump" when it struck the side of the tree. And, as I'd done dozens of times before, on dozens of other big, old trees — maples and otherwise, I quickly glanced at an old knot-hole about 20 feet up — the reason for my interest in the tree.

This time, unlike those dozens of others, there was a slight scuffle inside the tree and a small head with two bright yellow eyes appeared at the hole.

Now, despite the fact I regularly go around "thumping" hollow trees in the hope of flushing an owl, I was surprised when this one appeared. It was the first to react to my favorite owl-finding technique since I put a Saw-whet Owl out of an old basswood tree on the banks of the Assiniboine River near Winnipeg a long time ago.

This time it was a Screech Owl that peered indignantly at me. We "eyeballed" each other just long enough for me to see the owl's little horns — tufts of feathers which are often called ears — that marked its identity. What the owl had time to make of me in the momentary staring match remains unrecorded.

My surprise at running into this fairly common little denizen of our woodland was probably equal to yours when I said "fairly common." The fact is that owls, particularly our little Screech Owls, are not as rare as the occasional sightings suggest. Screech Owls are not only fairly abundant around Victoria, but often share our residential areas, usually unbeknownst to us.



Screech Owl . . . more common than you think

Part of the reason why Screech Owls go unnoticed is, of course, that they are most active at night — not that many of us aren't active at night too, it's just that our night activity seems to require light. The Owl's doesn't.

But while night covers a lot of the goings and comings of Screech Owls, their voices help too. That's because, unlike the popular conception that leaves most people thinking most owls hoot, Screech Owls neither hoot nor screech as their name might imply. Not only that, the noises they do make often go unnoticed in the general hubbub of modern city night-life.

No to hear a Screech Owl's soliloquy, one must not only find a place frequented by the little fellows, but one where it is quiet enough to allow their gentle calls to be heard. One such place in Victoria in on the campus of the University of Victoria. There, in most wooded areas at this time of the year, it is possible to hear Screech Owls.

But, as I implied earlier, you'd better know what you're listening for, because the calls of our western Screech Owls have been described as sounding like anything from the distant noise of a one-cylinder pump, to the noise made by a bouncing rubber ball.

If that leaves you a little perplexed, maybe this will help: cup your hands over your mouth, purse your lips and force air out in short regularly-spaced bursts.

If I've described the technique properly, and you've carried it out the same way, the result should be a series of low-pitched, staccato toos.

Once you've got the toos down, gradually speed up the pace for as long as you can sustain it, so that the final toos run together rapidly. The end result should be too-too-too-too-to-to-to-to-to.

Surprisingly, one of the best ways to get the little fellows calling is imitating them. And even a poor imitation works.

On the other hand, if you don't have the wind for such shenanigans there's always "thumping."

WINDYHAUGH MANOR

Built in 1906, Windyhaugh was a grand country home and the scene of many social activities. It was built high on the Queen Anne Slope to command a view of Rockland, the city and the sea. Much of the grandeur and the charm of the Edwardian Architecture has been preserved so that as an owner you can enjoy the best of our architectural heritage, yet have all of the modern conveniences of today. The tranquil ¾ acre garden offers total seclusion and abounds with quail and other wildlife.

The remaining suite is called "The Loft" as it is situated high on the western side and rises to a third storey loft with a stunning city and sea view. It is 1258 sq. ft. in all featuring vaulted ceilings, cedar walls, antique oak balustrades and a custom black and cedar kitchen.

There will only be one Windyhaugh and for $69,900 you could be one of the privileged owners. Put a visit to Windyhaugh on your agenda this weekend. It's open Sat. and Sun. 2-4 p.m.

Vancouver Firm Buys 13% Abitibi Interest

TORONTO (CP) — The chairman of Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. says a friendly buyer, West Fraser Timber Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, has purchased a 13-per-cent interest in Abitibi.

Thomas Bell said he was delighted that the U.S.-controlled company had purchased the shares. The cost was about $50 million.

West Fraser now is Abitibi's largest shareholder.

HCI Holdings Ltd. recently sold to West Fraser its five-per-cent interest in Abitibi for $20 a share.

Another five per cent is owned by Maurice Strong and Paul Nathanson, who were associated with HCI when it purchased the Abitibi shares last September.

An associate of Strong's refused to comment whether those shares were part of the West Fraser purchase.

Douglas Johnston, West Fraser president, said in a statement the purchase was made for investment purposes only and the company does not intend to seek a controlling position in Abitibi.

Mother's Day—it's a time to remind her of how much you care. And what more eloquent way to express your love than by giving her a single, precious rose?

A pendant specially designed to delight her on Mother's Day ... yet so pretty she'll want to make an occasion of many days by wearing it throughout the year.

Crafted of the finest Parian porcelain—delicate, translucent and lovely—The Mother's Day Pendant portrays the perfect rose, with just the right pink blush to it, against an ivory-colored background. Undeniably feminine. Distinctive and classic. And so cleverly sculpted that the tiny rose looks almost real enough to smell! Plus, for just the right touch of elegance, there's a rim of gold, meticulously applied by hand.

So this year, give her a rose that needs no water ... and has no thorns. The Mother's Day Pendant. A single rose that says more than a whole bouquet. Only $35. And available exclusively in limited edition.

To acquire yours in time for giving on Mother's Day, return the order form below postmarked by April 20, 1979. After this date, this very special pendant, which is being created expressly for Mother's Day 1979 by Franklin Porcelain, will never be made available again in this country. So it's a good idea to return the order form right away.

After all, if you say it with this special rose, you can be sure she'll get your message. With love....

Available only until April 20, 1979.
Each pendant will be sent in time for giving on Mother's Day.

Northern Slaying Solved

WHITEHORSE (CP) — Thomas Lee Clark, 31, was sentenced Friday to life imprisonment after he pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

He will not be eligible for parole for 10 years.

Clark originally was charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Robert John Rey, 22, whose badly-decomposed body was found in the bush about 48 kilometres north of Watson Lake in August, 1978.

Rey, of Greely, Colo., had been shot through the chest with a heavy-calibre rifle and his body flung over an embankment into the brush.

Clark, a transient, was arrested in Florida.

Court was told that Rey met Clark late in May, 1978, at Swift River on the Alaska Highway and after befriending Rey, they went on a fishing trip.

Early in June, Clark shot Rey with Rey's rifle, assumed Rey's identity and with his wife drove north in Rey's truck to Haines, Alaska, where they took a boat to Seattle. They used Rey's credit cards as they went.

Rey's wife reported her husband missing when receipts from his credit cards began to arrive with forged signatures.

Clark was arrested in a spot check in Florida in September, still using Rey's name. Rey's body and clothing belonging to the Clarks had been found near the scene of the murder.

Clark was returned to Canada in October.

Court was told that Clark told an undercover RCMP officer who had been planted in an adjacent cell that he was a member of a religious cult — the Utopian Zion Coptic church — which advocated drug use and polygamy.

Clark told the undercover agent that the man he had killed had been a U.S. narcotics agent who had been investigating the church for importing narcotics.

He gave the same story to another undercover officer in Whitehorse, but the story was just an effort to brag, the court was told, because the real motive was simple gain.

Clark's wife originally was charged with murder but the charge was dropped after investigation showed she knew nothing about it.

Wash. Pipeline Plan Revamped

SEATTLE (AP) — Northern Tier Pipeline Co. announced Friday it will route its proposed crude oil pipeline from Port Angeles underneath Puget Sound rather than along a previously selected route around the south end of the sound.

Though marginally more expensive, the new route is "economically, politically and environmentally feasible," said Jim Hodge, Northern Tier vice-president of public and government affairs.

"We feel one of the most significant political and environmental issues in the state is the tanker traffic on the sound," Hodge said. "We consider this route to be be responsive to that."

Northern Tier has proposed building an oil port at Port Angeles, Wash., to pump Alaska crude 2,400 kilometres to Clearbrook, Minn., and other northern tier states.

The new route would be buried under the sound for about 28 kilometres from Port Williams on the Olympic Peninsula to the west shore of Whidbey Island. It then crosses the island and would be buried under Saratoga Passage for about four miles to the north of Camano Island.

The pipeline would enter the mainland near Stanwood, Wash., and follow existing pipeline and transmission line corridors south to North Bend, Wash., where it would join the original route.

Hodge said Northern Tier is revising its applications to be filed with the Washington Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council, the federal department of interior and other agencies.

'Several Millions' Offered

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia Indians have balked at accepting several million dollars for the federal and provincial governments for 3,200 acres of land expropriated in 1916.

The offer includes the original land value of $1 million plus interest from 1916 to the date of the offer. Federal Indian affairs officials would not reveal contents of the offer.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Thursday that the offer totalled $1 million.

"The several million dollar offer is somewhat less than current market value," Brian Hartley, the federal government's B.C. land claims representative, said Friday.

$1.2M Target Set for United Way

A $1.2 million target has been set for the 1979 campaign of the United Way of Greater Victoria.

Art Roberts, newly elected president of the United Way executive committee, noted at a luncheon-meeting Friday it was the first time the goal exceeded the million mark.

In 1978, United Way raised a total of $926,500.

The man nominated to manage the million dollar campaign is Bob Harvey.

The campaign will kick off on Sept.15, but some fund raising activities will take place before that date.

The first will be a Boy Scout walkathon sponsored by United Way. It is scheduled to be held on May 12.

Other members elected to the executive committee are Ralston Alexander, first vice-president; Alan Aldous, second vice-president; Gary Orrico, treasurer; and Reg. Reid, past president.

Guest speaker Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said without the assistance of private charitable organizations, the government could not carry out its responsibilities as effectively.

She said government agencies this year would be introducing special programs in conjunction with the International Year of the Child and Family.

The health ministry would be introducing a program to ensure that all new mothers in the province get the best nutrition, she said.

This would not only assist new children but would raise the health standards of mothers, she added.

Government units, organizations and companies which received gold plaque awards for having the highest standard of employee donations are as follows:

A Company, Third Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry; Bank of Nova Scotia, 702 Yates; Base Headquarters CFB Esquimalt, CFAD Rocky Point Torpedo Shop, Canada Employment Centre, Canada Permanent Trust, Canadian Forces School of Music, Canadian Mental Health Association, Clarkson, Gordon & Co., Creed & Co., D. Second Look Ordered at Racquet Club Assessment

The assessment of the Racquet Club of Victoria was ordered Friday to be returned to the Assessment Appeal Board for reconsideration.

Mr. Justice Martin Taylor of B.C. Supreme Court said it appeared that the board felt the concept of "economic obsolescence" was not appropriate in law in the case of a non-profit entity such as the Racquet Club.

He ruled the board was in error if it declined to make an allowance for economic obsolescence as a matter of principle believing that such an allowance could not, in law, be granted.

Club lawyer Alan Emery argued that economic obsolescence means a loss of value by an exterior economic force, in this case competition from other sports facilities, particularly the Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

He said the club operates almost entirely on membership dues but annual losses have mounted over the years and were $100,000 in 1977.

Emery said the assessor made no allowance for the economic impact of competing facilities and the Assessment Appeal Board did not consider economic obsolescence and it should have. He asked the court to remit the case to the board for consideration.

Robert Hutchison, counsel for the Assessment Authority of B.C., said when the Insurance Corporation of B.C. came in he was sure private insurance business was affected but that didn't reduce the value of their buildings.

Similarly, he said, the 15 per cent devaluation of the Canadian dollar has not led to an assessment increase for the export-heavy B.C. lumber industry.

He said economic obsolescence is a form of depreciation and the Racquet Club did get its assessment reduced in the form of an increase in the rate of depreciation.

What was involved in this case, he said, was a question of fact, not law, and the Assessment Authority couldn't do anything but sympathize with the Racquet Club over competition from municipal sports centres.

Taylor said it appeared the Assessment Appeal Board felt economic obsolescence was not appropriate in law for the Racquet Club. Taylor said it also appeared that in approving a value on the depreciated replacement-value approach, the board felt it could not consider the fact that the Racquet Club had considerable financial difficulties resulting, apparently, from the existence of similar facilities, some of them municipally owned.

That, he said, was an error of law.

The cost of replacement is relevant in arriving at the actual value and it was proper to consider what a hypothetical prudent organization, interested in using the Racquet Club, would pay for it, he said.

It was proper and necessary for the assessor to ask if a prudent person would pay what the buildings cost. There were circumstances in which the prudent person might not — if the buildings were too big or their usefulness was no longer recognized by the public.

In those circumstances, if the replacement approach is used in setting the value, there must be an allowance not only for depreciation but there must be consideration of the reduced attractiveness of the improvements, or economic obsolescence.

But the mere fact that the Racquet Club has lost income does not mean, by itself, that it has lost attractiveness to a purchaser, he added.

Before the Judge

A 24-year-old Victoria man was jailed for 14 days for making false statements in connection with claims for unemployment insurance benefits in 1977.

Judge Fred Green handed out concurrent 14-day sentences after Randy Smith, 2579 Prior, pleaded guilty to eight counts in connection with UIC claims in Victoria and Kelowna.

In addition, Green imposed a further five days after Smith pleaded guilty to failing to appear in court previously on the charges.

Crown counsel Harold Turnham told the court Smith began making claims for UIC benefits on Feb. 8, 1977, and continued to receive benefits after he began working on Feb. 23 of the same year. Smith also made claims in Kelowna on July 4 and continued his claims even after beginning work for the city of Kelowna at the recreation centre on July 20.

Turnham said Smith told investigating UIC officers that he had seen others get away with the practice.

The total amount of benefits received by Smith to which he wasn't entitled, Turnham said, was $1,146.

A 22-year-old Victoria man who punched a man he suspected of socializing with his wife was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation.

Dennis Allan Starck, 1226 Rudlin, pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm Jan. 21.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Starck went to 3237 Cedar Hill, knocked on the door, opened it without anyone answering and then punched John Ring, who had just come down some stairs. The victim barricaded himself in the bathroom but Starck tried to kick down the door before Saanich police arrived, Mulligan said.

* * *

A 19-year-old Esquimalt man who damaged a taxi Jan. 27 was fined $100 and ordered to pay for the damage.

Darrell Felt, 948 Esquimalt Road, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Mulligan said Felt and some companions were walking along Broughton about 2:30 a.m. when Bradley Cambrey, a driver for Empress Taxi, noticed one of Felt's companions breaking a sign and stopped his vehicle.

Felt walked over to Cambrey, Mulligan stated, and told him to "get lost." Felt then went to the vehicle, bent a door-lock button and kicked at the trunk, causing a total of $80.65 damage.

* * *

A 26-year-old driver who pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and driving while suspended received a total of 35 days in jail.

Jay Anthony Gold, 53 Knollwood, was given 30 days for the first charge and an additional five days for the second.

Court was informed Gold was involved in an accident March 1 on Esquimalt Road which resulted in a total of $2,200 damages. Mulligan said Gold was convicted of impaired driving Jan. 23, 1979, and was fined $400 as well as suspended from driving at that time.

* * *

A 33-year-old man received a fine, community service work and a jail term after pleading guilty to hit-and-run and impaired driving.

Kenneth Gordon Leveridge, R.R. 6, Barker Road, was fined $75 and ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work for the hit-and-run and was sentenced to five days in jail for the impaired driving.

Mulligan said the incident occurred Feb. 27 after off-duty police officers noticed Leveridge in an intoxicated condition at the Colwood Inn at 12:40 a.m. The officers phoned Colwood RCMP but before officers arrived, Leveridge got into his van and drove into a parked car.

Two civilians tried to stop Leveridge at that point, Mulligan said, but failed when Leveridge put his vehicle in reverse and drove off.

The off-duty officers began a pursuit of Leveridge, stopping him in the 400-block of the Old Island Highway. However, Leveridge again put his van in reverse, causing minor damage to the officers' vehicle, and took off once more.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: David Corin Buckley, 33, of 305 Niagara, $450; Glenn Cecil Danbrook, 46, of 1728 Cedar Hill Cross Road, $350; Velma May Payne, also known as Velma May Cleveland, 41, of 3330 Metchosin, $250; and John Lawrence Baines, 19, of 2720 Richmond, $250.

In addition, Baines was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Lawyer Again Seeking Calif. Jurisdiction In PWA Crash

EDMONTON (CP) — Lawyer Jerry Sterns of San Francisco said Thursday he has filed a writ in a California court seeking reversal of a judge's decision barring Canadians from seeking damages in connection with the crash of a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 at Cranbrook last February.

Sterns also said in a telephone interview he will appear in Federal Court in Los Angeles April 2 in a second suit intended to win California jurisdiction.

Sterns is acting for relatives of 19 of the total 43 crash victims. He said he is confident he can win damages five to eight times higher in California than would be possible in Canadian courts.

Six Switch Election In Tofino Drug Case

Six more men accused of conspiracy to import marijuana last summer re-elected trial method in county court Friday to judge alone rather than judge and jury, bringing the total to eight.

The remaining five men will be tried by judge and jury in county court April 2.

The latest to switch trial method were Robert Sherman Miller, 33, Gordon Barlow Tait, 32, and Frederick MacKintosh Tait, 35, all of North Vancouver, Terrence Gerard Trainor, 28, of Langley, Kevin Gerard Gushue, 26, of Surrey, and Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Toronto.

Earlier, Melville Douglas Balfour, 31, of Lasqueti Island and Lino Colatosti, 36, also known as Allen Valenti, of Qualicum Beach, switched to trial by judge alone. Balfour's trial date was set for Aug. 20 and Colatosti's case was adjourned to June 13 to set the trial date.

The latest six men had their case adjourned also to June 13 to set the trial date.

The five men whose judge and jury trial will start April 2 are Garth Clarence Vincent Sexton, 27, of Vancouver, William Harvey Shears, 30, also known as Ronald Cecil Spurrell, of Surrey, Frederick Charles Scott, 27, of Vancouver, Richard John Andrews, 28, also known as John Mobley Doss, of Dillon, Colorado, formerly of Newfoundland, and Steven Cavanaugh Manning, 34, also known as Frank Piersanti or Michael Cash Redman, of Montreal.

The prosecution again opposed the re-elections saying all 13 men, who are jointly charged, should stand trial together.

But Vancouver lawyer Peter Hart, counsel for three of the six men who re-elected Friday, said the jury trial will be shorter with a reduced number of accused persons and the judge alone trial should not be nearly as long.

Judge Peter Millward said as a result of positions taken by lawyers for the eight men who have switched to trial by judge alone, the public will be saved considerable expense and so will the accused men and he ruled they should have the right to change their previously-selected method of trial.

The men are charged with conspiracy to import 13 tons of marijuana said to be worth $20.8 million seized near Tofino.

Fishy Warning Of Earthquake

TOKYO (Reuter) — Catfish have given advance warning of earthquakes by racing round their tanks, but so far they are not accepted as an alarm system, Japan's Natural Disaster Prevention Council said Tuesday. The nomally placid fish acted this way before 17 or 20 earth tremors in Tokyo in the seven months since December of 1977, the council report said.

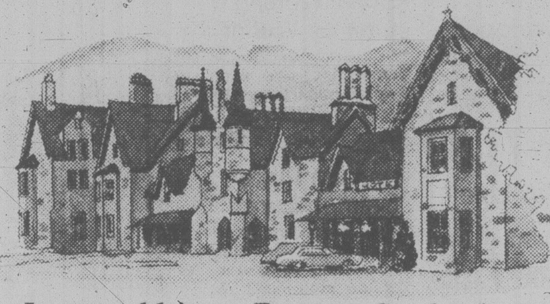
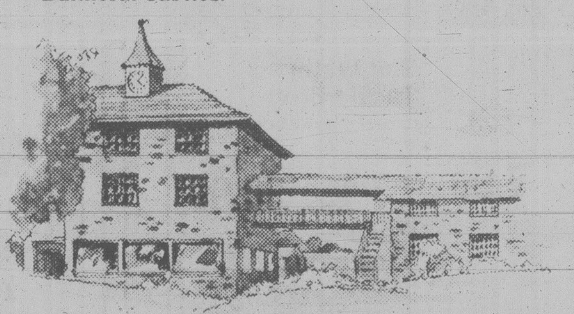
The Star, Wells, Somerset.
Typical of the old coaching inns of Britain, this 16th century charmer still boasts a cobbled carriageway. It stands within sight of Wells Cathedral, one of the most magnificent in Britain, and is near splendid scenic walks and views.



Invercauld Arms, Braemar, Scotland.
A Deeside village famous for its beauty, and over 1,000 feet up in the bracing Highland air, houses this roomy and comfortable family hotel. Nearby places of great interest include Braemar and Balmoral Castles.



Last Drop Village, Bromley Cross, Lancashire.
A complete village, lovingly created from old moorland cottages. Includes a charming hotel, pub, cozy tea shop…and of course cobbled streets for strolling. Unique, certainly; but only one of many uniquely charming inns in Britain.

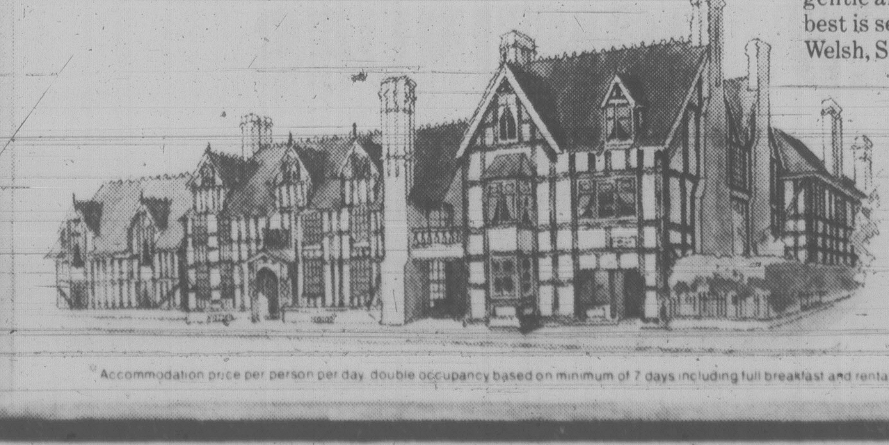
St Brides Hotel, Saundersfoot, Wales.
In the sunny southwest of Wales, the scenery is gentle and the sea-views spectacular. One of the best is seen from the delightful, and typically Welsh, St Brides Hotel.

Getting about.
Thanks to Britain's compactness and its well-marked roads, getting about in your rental car is easy as well as economical.
Or ask about our modestly priced Britrail pass. Both give you unlimited mileage.



The Raven, Droitwich, Hereford & Worcestershire.
Half-timbered Elizabethan manor house converted into a comfy hotel, in an elegant spa town featuring a lively market and some celebrated natural-brine spa baths. Situated in one of England's loveliest Counties.

Airport Tax Hike Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Friday he is delaying for several weeks a tax increase for air travellers announced in his November budget.

The increase — which amounts to almost a doubling of airport taxes — was originally scheduled to go into effect April 1. It has been postponed until legislation authorizing it has parliamentary approval. A spokesman for the minister could not specify when the new rate will come into effect.

Legislation calling for the increase was before the Commons Friday and received a rough ride. There was no indication when it would receive final reading and then be sent to the Senate or whether an election call will kill it.

When it takes effect, air travellers will pay a maximum of $15 on flights in Canada and the United States. For international flights, the tax will be increased to $12 and later $15. The current maximum inside and outside the country is $8.

The airport tax increase is one of the few tax changes in the fall budget which requires Parliament's approval. Other measures, such as the three-per-cent federal sales tax cut, became effective on Nov. 17, the morning after the budget was presented.

Conservative transport critic Don Mazankowski told Chretien it is unfair of the government to ask consumers and wage earners to restrain themselves, when he is about to impose a tax increase of this magnitude. He said the higher tax increase will result in an increase in the deficit between the amount of money Canadians spend out of the country and the amount tourists spend here.

Max Low

When that mysterious phone call came one day, my initial reaction was Good Grief! Must be a joke.

But no. Sure enough it was confirmed later by a letter. The Capital of the Age of Enlightenment — otherwise known as the Victoria Transcendental Meditation Centre — wanted to present me with the Maharishi Award for my "outstanding, successful and inspiring contribution to the communications field."

The Maharishi Awards, John Ward, chairman of the Victoria TM Centre, explained in his letter, are part of a world-wide celebration being held in more than 100 countries to usher in the spring season by honoring 10 of the most accomplished citizens of each city.

"This Age of Enlightenment celebration is the result of the wave of success which has accompanied the teaching of the Transcendental Meditation program to about two million people throughout the world in the last 20 years, and to about 8,000 in Victoria since 1962 when the movement got going here," the letter said.

Previous outstanding citizens to be honored with an award for excellence in their particular field include conductor Laszlo Gati, Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo, MLA Charles Barber, former MLA Scott Wallace, musician Paul Horn, Victoria Mayor Michael Young, former Mayor Peter Pollen, artist Brian Travers-Smith and (in the media line) Ida Clarkson, John Makin and Gorde Hunter.

And so because, apart from the odd reward for athletic endeavors at a much younger age, I had never before received an award and because it's highly unlikely that I ever will again, I decided to go along to the ceremonies Thursday night at the Victoria Golf Club.

There was John Ward greeting everyone in the foyer and explaining that they just wanted to honor the most successful people in the community — people who haven't had the recognition they deserve. I said thanks, I'd tell my boss.

There was a symbolic cutting of a huge cake inscribed with the map of the world and the lighting of long candles planted in the middle of each continent.

There was lovely Marney Ward explaining TM procedures for us non-thinkers and pointing out that this has been declared by the Maharishi as the Year of All Possibilities. Must keep that in mind.

There was MC for the evening Roger Smeeth outlining the domain of the World Government of the Age of Enlightenment as the "Domain of Consciousness" and saying that in no way does it conflict with the domain of more earthly governments.

And there was a delightful snack supper followed by a dance.

In between, there were the awards in 10 categories with words of praise by the presenters and replies by the recipients. And believe me, I found myself in some pretty heavy company as far as credentials were concerned.

Like Robin and Winnifred Wood of the Victoria Conservatory of Music, who were honored for their "high level of creativity in the community," and who spoke delightfully of joy and loving and said that is what music is all about.

Like that ideas man of Victoria theatre, Alan Purdy, actor, director and producer, who was honored as "most enlightened public leader" for his work as president of the McPherson Playhouse Foundation.

Then there were Sister Bede Sullivan, a Benedictine nun reknowned for her work in adult education; Elizabeth Creery, who established and runs Transition House for women; Dr. Bruce Andrews, who developed the University of Victoria's successful internship program for student-teachers; Dr. William Gaddes, famed for his work in neuropsychology; and Ray Couvelier, president of the Victoria branch of the Red Cross Society.

And there was Sohan Jawl, a self-made businessman who rose from a truck-driver and founed Jawl Enterprises, honored in the prosperity and progress category; and Philip Delesalle, Canada's most outstanding gymnast ever, who received the award for health and immortality.

As I sat listening to all the lists of accomplishments, I started to think I was in the wrong place and to wonder what on earth someone could say about me. Kindly, presenter John Ward listed the two things that came into his mind about my column as "gentleness and a quality of broadness."

And the category in which my award appeared: information and inspiration. As I said at the beginning: Good Grief!

Dream trip to Victoria became a nightmare for Ursula Prosho and Al Lubkowski, but they made it

Epic Trip Comedy of Errors

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The saga of how Al Lubkowski and Ursula Prosho bought a 30-foot sailboat and brought her here from Montreal rivals Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors in incredibility.

Shakespeare probably knew well in advance what the ending of his story would be but when Lubkowski and Prosho set sail from Montreal they had no idea their 42-year old sloop Zest would make her final 4,200 mile run from the Florida Keys to her new home port on a trailer behind a 1973 station wagon, bought for $600 to do the job.

Making her way north by land with her spars removed, Zest caused more than a few raised eyebrows as she was hauled along desert highways.

Lubkowski tells about the Alabama couple who asked him if Zest was a submarine.

Others wanted to know if he knew more than they did, was Zest being readied for a coming flood?

The station wagon took 11 days to make the trek, gobbling up a gallon of gas for each seven miles at a total cost of $500.

Lubkowski admits going down hills with brakes you can't trust and a 10,000 pound load behind you is an experience he'd rather not repeat again.

The saga began in Calgary three years ago where Lubkowski was working as an onsite planner for Parks Canada and Prosho was director of a day-care centre.

The combination of Fireball dinghy sailing on Glenmore Reservoir and stories of ocean cruising in yachting magazines convinced them that sailing off into the sunset to the Carribean and other romantic places was the life for them.

When they first saw Zest she was sitting at the far end of a shed just outside Montreal. They fell in love with her sleek lines in spite of the fact she was obviously in need of a major renovation job.

In their inexperienced eyes she was an ocean racer. They did not realize that she was one of the English-built Teal boats that were designed as around-the-buoy racers and weekend cruisers.

They were only too willing to be convinced by a friend that the boat was a steal at $1,500 and that $2,000 at most in materials and perhaps two months of work would see them setting sail on the voyage of their dreams.

They were $6,000 poorer and it was eight months later by the time Zest was in any condition to be put in the water.

Meanwhile, among other catastrophies, Zest had barely escaped demolition when the roof of the shed she was in collapsed during a storm.

Even putting her in the water was a headache. The marina where she was stored had gone bankrupt and there was no crane to lower her in. She had to be hauled by a flat-top to the nearest facility.

Finally they were off; their objective to sail Zest to British Columbia via the Panama Canal. They made leisurely stopovers during the 2½ months it took to get to the Florida Keys.

So confident were they that they would obtain their goal they struck out the B.C. flag at the halfway mark.

They were dumbfounded, however, when they met experienced sailor John Letcher, who is known for the self-steering gear he invented, and were told that going to B.C. would involve an ocean voyage to Hawaii.

It was then they realized that crossing the ocean in Zest would be darned uncomfortable and probably downright dangerous.

Graceful as she may be, Zest had only sitting height inside her cabin. There was no room to carry the water, gas and other supplies they would need. She had no self-bailing cockpit as insurance against being swamped by heavy seas.

After reaching the Florida Keys, Lubkowski and Prosho returned to Canada to earn more money to pay for Zest's last land-locked leg to Victoria.

Lubkowski returned alone to bring their dream boat back, Prosho working in a Victoria day-care centre to help pay expenses.

Lubkowski says it was no mean trick getting the station wagon and trailer on and off the ferry from Anacortes on the last stretch to Victoria.

He was the last to get on the ferry and when they left Zest'a mast was protruding over the ferry's side.

She now sits on the parking lot of the apartmemnt house at 2136 Ridge Road where the couple lives, waiting for a more suitable anchorage and way of life.

CBC Fest Slated Here

The 1979 edition of one of the three top festival events in Canada will be located in Victoria this fall.

The CBC Radio Festival, for which the corporation pulls out all stops, will take place here from Sept.22 through 29.

The festival will incorporate top artists and groups from across Canada as well as prominent Victoria artists and ensembles, in 10 days of full-scale concert series and performances, many of which will be broadcast nation-wide. The performances will take place at University Centre auditorium, McPherson Playhouse, and possibly the Royal Theatre.

Among those already committed to the festival are the Vancouver Bach Choir, Toronto-based pianist Anton Kuerti and a comedy event entitled Dr. Bundolo's Pandemonium Medicine Show.

With completion of installation of the Clearihue organ at UVic, a leading Canadian organist will probably be brought here and a chamber opera yet to be chosen, will be presented.

At the McPherson, among artists to be featured will be top-ranking Canadian mezzo soprano Judith Forst and Victoria pianist Robin Wood.

The popular CBC afternoon program, Three's Company, will be broadcast from Victoria throughout the week and tentatively planned is a KCTS Nine special program on the festival.

Collaborating locally with CBC producers is UVic information officer Kim Whale.

"This festival is providing far greater opportunity for the whole community than was originally foreseen," says Whale. "Involvment of local professional musicians is increasing for example. CBC provides ample funds for the artists so we are not hampered.

"Leading up to it there will be distribution of thousands of brochures and a TV-radio campaign. The idea will be to create a full city-wide festival atmosphere. With the co-operation of the city and province we hope to have special festival banners raised in all the main streets to celebrate the fall event," he says.

Mika Bid For NDP

Saanich Alderman John Mika announced today he will seek the New Democratic Party nomination for Saanich and the Islands provincial constituency.

"I have decided to let my name stand as a result of urging from party members and a surprisingly large number of independent voters and even other parties," he said.

Mika, 48, is in his third year as an an alderman on Saanich Council and works as a staff assistant to the NDP Caucus.

The NDP nominating meeting will be held April 7 in Keating Elementary School.

Conservatory's Move Paid by Lottery Funds

A provincial lottery grant will accompany the move of Victoria Conservatory of Music to its new home in the St. Ann's Academy annex. Transfer from its present location in Craigdarroch Castle will be accomplished in early September.

The announcement was made Friday, by Hugh Curtis, provincial secretary and minister of government services, at a press conference which included representatives of the conservatory. The lottery grant will cover the first year's rental as well as renovations to the building.

"Victoria Conservatory of Music is one of this province's most important cultural institutions," Curtis stated; "yet it operates without debt and with only a minimum of government support."

He went on to note that he had received overwhelming public support for the conservatory's move in response to his request for ideas for use of St. Ann's Academy.

"However, the main building requires at least two to three years to renovate," he said, "and in view of the conservatory's urgent space problem the annex became a more immediate solution."

"In arranging for this move," Curtis concluded, "we are recognizing that under the guidance of Dr. Robin Wood and with the support of a strong board of directors under Ron Alexander, the conservatory has grown in stature while retaining close contact with this community.

IMPROMTU CONCERT involved Jennifer Wallis, Hugh Curtis, David Thompson and Kerry Chow when Curtis announced the move to St. Ann's.

Raising Thetis Would Kill 360 Trees: Report

A fish and wildlife branch proposal that would raise water levels in Thetis Lake could result in the killing of approximately 360 trees, according to botanists hired by the Thetis Lake Park Nature Sanctuary Association.

The botanists' report, however, also indicates that the lakeshore would re-establish itself at new levels within a number of years.

The report, by botanists Russ George and Margaret Norris, says that higher water levels would flood out 250 trees which are already having difficulty surviving on the lakeshore.

"The proposed increased depth and the month or so additional period of flooding will cause these trees to die," states the report.

It adds that additional trees which would be within or very close to the proposed new shoreline level may also die.

It says that "the lakeshores would require a number of years to return to their present relatively pristine state."

The document also points out that the existing lakeshore was originally established by extensive flooding in 1895 when dams were built to increase the depth of the lakes by 15-20 feet.

In presenting the report to Victoria's city council the Sanctuary Association states that "the likelihood of 360 dead trees is too high a price to pay for retaining water in the Thetis Lakes."

The association adds that it feels the fish and wildlife branch can find other alternatives.

The branch had proposed increasing water storage in the lake by a few inches in order to provide a more continual flow of water into Craigflower Creek during the dry summer months.

The branch is currently undertaking a major rehabilitation program aimed at re-establishing cutthroat trout in the Gorge. The trout spawn in Craigflower and Colquitz Creeks.

Branch biologist Chris Dodd said that only ten cutthroat trout returned to spawn in Craigflower this fall, along with 213 coho.

"As far as that creek's concerned we've just about hit rock bottom," he said.

Dodd said the stream, with adequate water flow, has the potential to support thousands of trout and even greater numbers of salmon.

He said the branch could do a lot to improve the stream's habitat "but we can't do any instream work until we've got some water to work with."

At its regular meeting Thursday city council voted to return the fish and wildlife proposal to the parks committee for further study.

The referal was made because of a letter from Allan Murray, assistant deputy minister of the environment ministry, which rejected some of the many conditions the city had attached to the proposal.

Murray said, for instance, that his department could not agree to a restrictive covenant that would ensure that no further pollution or development take place in the upper or lower Thetis Lake watershed.

Murray said that "The provincial government clearly does not have jurisdicition over much of the land in the two watersheds, it therefore could not provide the assurances you request."

Murray added that "It seems that a relatively simple request, as originally envisaged for the betterment of the region as a whole, has been severly set back by a number of side issues."

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who is in full support of the project, said that council had deliberatly sabotaged the project by hanging so many conditions on it that it was bound to sink.

"One of the reasons we put that (pollution covenant) in there was because we knew that government couldn't comply — so that was an easy way out for us.

"The points we put in there were very unfair and virtually impossible to meet."

A Weekend For Merger Homework

CHICAGO (CP) — A couple of high-priced lawyers are working over the weekend to try to work out differences between the National Hockey League and four World Hockey Association clubs blocking the way to a merger agreement.

A 24-hour bargaining session between the two parties broke off early Friday and they agreed to turn the discussions over to NHL counsel Gil Stein and WHA lawyer Bob Caporale.

If an agreement is worked out, Quebec Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers and New England Whalers will join the NHL next season and the other two WHA teams, Cincinnati Stingers and Birmingham Bulls, will disband.

But both NHL president John Ziegler and Howard Baldwin, his WHA counterpart, said some aspects of the senior league's 20-page expansion proposal are still creating difficulties.

Ziegler said the NHL board of governors, which approved the plan by a 14-3 vote Thursday after rejecting three merger proposals in the last two years, could be recalled on 48 hours' notice if an agreement appeared possible.

"A lot will depend on the work we do over the weekend," he said. "Of course, time is a factor."

Baldwin said he was optimistic over the progress of the talks but added: "There are a few problems to iron out."

The WHA president said the NHL's proposals were unacceptable as presented "but we've proposed some modifications."

"We've asked for some changes which the NHL board will have to look at," said Peter Pocklington, owner of the Oilers. "Still, I'm cautiously optimistic."

"There are some matters we'll have to discuss next week," said Bill Wirtz of Chicago Black Hawks, chairman of the NHL expansion committee. "We got through all the items but there were some fine points on which we'll need more detail."

Ziegler said the marathon negotiating session produced WHA counter-proposals in most areas of disagreement that would probably be acceptable to the NHL board. On the other hand, if these were rejected out of hand by the expansion committee, "then the issue would be dead."

A major bone of contention appeared to be the stipulation that the four WHA clubs would be allowed to protect only two skaters and two goaltenders on their present rosters, most of the remainder reverting to NHL teams which either owned them or drafted them since the WHA was formed in 1972.

An exception was made for 51-year-old Gordie Howe, who would be permitted to finish his career with New England.

The WHA teams were understood to be seeking protection for four skaters and a goaltender.

After absorbing the players returning from the WHA, the NHL clubs would be permitted to protect two goaltenders and 15 skaters and the newcomers would restock their rosters in an expansion draft of unprotected players.

Another bone of contention was the status of players of junior age signed by WHA clubs before they became eligible for the NHL amateur draft. The proposal calls for them to be subjected to the 1979 draft in June.

This creates a particular problem in the case of 18-year-old Wayne Gretzky, the Edmonton scoring ace, whose multi-million-dollar contract with the Oilers does not expire for about 20 years.

If the merger succeeds, Winnipeg and Edmonton will join the NHL's Smythe Division with Chicago, Colorado Rockies, St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks. Quebec will play with Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, Minnesota North Stars and Toronto Maple Leafs in the Adams Division.

New England will be in the Norris Division with Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles Kings and Pittsburgh Penguins while Washington Capitals will switch from the Norris to the Patrick Division, joining Atlanta Flames, New York Islanders, New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

Eight Bruins, Coach Banned

New Westminster Bruins are going to pay dearly for their actions in a brawl-marred Western Hockey League game in New Westminster Thursday and the final price may be a chance to advance in the playoffs.

Coach Ernie McLean has been suspended indefinitely, eight Bruins were slapped with varying suspensions and the club was fined a total of $1,500 as the result of a brawl at the end of Thursday game with Portland Winter Hawks.

Bruin rookie Andrew Ristau was suspended for five games for being the first player off the bench. His move also cost the club a $500 fine.

An additional $1,000 was slapped against the club, principally against McLean, for not controlling players.

Winger John Paul Kelly also was tagged with a five-game suspension, while defenceman Boris Fistric was suspended for four games.

Suspended for three games each for "gang-fighting" were: Rob Roflick, Bruce Howes, Rick Amann, Terry Kirkham and Bill Hobbins.

Referee Terry Gregson assessed 191 minutes in penalties, 156 of them to the Bruins, who lost 4-1 to the Winter Hawks.

The brawl erupted with seven seconds left in the game. Bruin players left their bench to join two fights in progress on the ice. Portland players did not leave their bench.

The suspensions means that all eight players will miss New Westminster's final two league games. Bruins open the Western Division's three-team, round-robin semi-final series in Victoria against the Cougars but a league spokesman said that the third game of the three-game suspensions take effect next Friday when Portland and New Westminster play in Vancouver in their first playoff meeting.

Fistric will miss a second playoff game while Kelly and Ristau both will have to sit out a total of three playoff games.

Les Jackson, coach of Revelstoke Bruins, New Westminster's farm team in the B.C. Junior League, is expected to handle the club in McLean's absence.

A spokesman for New Westminster police said Friday the incident is under investigation and charges are being considered.

General manager Brian Shaw of the Winter Hawks said he was disgusted by New Westminster's actions and that he intends to press for assault charges.

The Columbian reported that two Portland players were attacked by several New Westminsteer players with seven seconds left in the game. The New Westminster newspaper said one Portland player had to crawl back to the players' bench after being badly beaten.

"We have to lay charges. We have no alternative," said Shaw. "I've got kids' lives at stake and some of them could have been killed."

ERNIE McLEAN
. . . indefinite suspension

Coach Ken Hodge of the Winter Hawks said he was sickened by what happened and "this is the worst thing I've ever seen. It was so obviously deliberate to everyone here."

Al Paradise, supervisor of officials for the Western Division, was at the game but refused comment on the incident or the officiating of Gregson.

McLean blamed the incident on the officiating and said the Bruins had "not been getting a fair shake" from WHL officials.

"I thought the referee lost control of the game in the second period," said McLean. "He should have thrown me out with seven seconds left for not putting five players on the ice."

The Columbian reported that the incident began with a fight between New Westminster's John Ogrodnick and Portland's Don Stewart at 19:53 of the third period. When play was to be resumed, New Westminster put four men on the ice, then two more, and Gregson awarded Portland a penalty shot because the Bruins had too many men on the ice.

Tim Tookey of the Winter Hawks shot wide against netminder Richard Martens, but not before McLean had defenceman Boris Fistric of the Bruins attempt to play goal while wearing a face mask.

Meanwhile in Victoria, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said hockey violence is a matter for the police and the people running the sport, not government.

Gardom said violence in hockey should not be allowed to continue and police may lay charges if they are called for in specific situations.

Triumph on Hawk Ice Has Meaning for Cats

It had no effect on the standings, but Victoria coach Jack Shupe still found meaning in the Cougars' 8-6 Western Hockey League victory over the Winter Hawks in Portland on Friday.

"We know we can beat them on their ice," said Shupe after the Cougars recorded their second victory in Portland this season. The Cougars also managed one tie in their eight visits to the Oregon city.

Shupe feels Victoria's record "has to be a psychological plus for us" heading into the playoffs that get under way next week. Cougars open the three-team, round-robin semi-finals by meeting New Westminster Bruins at Memorial Arena on Tuesday.

Cougars have a 1-4-3, won-lost-tied record at home against the Hawks, who had a 13-game winning streak broken Friday.

Victoria completes its regular season tonight by facing Medicine Hat Tigers at Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30.

Kevin Eastman started in goal for Victoria for the first time since early February and played well in stopping 37 shots. Eastman also was responsible for Victoria's 5-4 victory in Portland earlier in the campaign.

Rookie Bob Smith sparked Victoria's offense with his 20th and 21st goals, becoming the seventh Cougar to hit the 20-goal mark this season. George Fritz, Brad Yachimec, Geordie Robertson, Gary Lupul, Greg Adams and Mike Shields also scored for Victoria.

Max Kostovich scored twice for Portland, which now has lost only three times in 33 home games this season. Ron Chorney, Mike Toal, Joel Elliott and Florent Robidoux had the others. Chorney's first-period goal made him the club's eleventh 20-goal scorer this season, setting a league record. Portland and Billings Broncos held the previous record of 10.

In other action Friday, Brandon Wheat Kings eliminated Regina from the playoff picture by defeating the Pats 9-3, Lethbridge Broncos outgunned Saskatoon Blades 9-7 and Seattle Breakers breezed to an easy 12-5 victory over the Tigers.

Players in the Lower Island Youth Soccer Association will get a rest for the next two weekends.

Because of the school spring break, no matches have been scheduled.

Play is slated to resume the weekend of Apr. 7-8.

Would-Be Traffic Controller Directs Newfoundland to Final

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

With one big victory behind him, it was down to cases again today for Geoff Cunningham of St. John's, Newfoundland, in the 21st annual Canadian junior men's curling championship at Victoria Curling Club.

Cunningham, a university student who wants to become an air traffic controller, Friday won the round-robin competition of the 12-rink national championship with an extra-end 6-5 victory over Warren Proctor of Saskatchewan to finish with a 10-1 record.

Today he was scheduled to meet the winner of a semi-final game between Proctor and Mert Thompsett of Manitoba.

Thompsett finished in a tie with Proctor at 9-2 by defeating defending champion Darren Fish of Alberta 8-5.

Cunningham's only defeat in the week-long competition came at the hands of Peter Jenkins of Prince Edward Island.

Proctor lost earlier to Fish while Thompsett was beaten by both Cunningham and Proctor.

Jenkins finished with a final game 5-4 victory over Stacey Coomber of B.C. to finish fourth at 8-3. Coomber's loss gave B.C. a 4-7 record.

The showdown between Cunningham and Proctor was all it was billed and, for Proctor, a bitter disappointment.

Lying shot in the back eight foot and trailing by one at 5-4, he had a chance to win it all in the 10th.

All he needed was a draw to the eight foot. But for some inexplicable reason his front end didn't hit the broom in time, or wasn't called on, whichever, and he came up light just as Cunningham had done on his final stone moments earlier as he was attempting to freeze on Proctor's shot rock.

Came the extra end and Cunningham kept things clean until his final stone when he made a hit and a stick for the winning point.

Before that it was nip and tuck. With the score tied 2-2 after six ends, Cunningham forced what then appeared to be a big break.

He got two counters behind cover on the left side. Proctor had two choices — to go for a possible double and maybe get two or three, or draw for an almost-certain one. He picked the former and missed. Cunningham took the two points.

But Proctor wasn't through. He came back with a deuce of his own on the eighth, forced Cunningham to take one on the ninth and had everything going his way on the 10th until he came up inches short with that final draw for what would have been the game winner.

Thompsett had a struggle with Fish before getting into third place. Trailing 6-3 after eight, Fish got two back in the ninth and forced Thompsett to throw his final rock for the win.

That killed of all hope Jenkins had of getting into a playoff — for third after a week-long rally that had seen him win six games in a row after losing his first two.

Shavers Steals Show

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Larry Holmes is still on top of his share of the heavyweight boxing world. Earnie Shavers is in position again to reach the top. Ken Norton is in limbo.

Holmes defended the World Boxing Council title by knocking down young Ossie Ocasio four times in the seventh round — the first time with three straight punishing left jabs — and stopping him at 2:38 of the round.

But the 34-year-old Shavers stole the show by stopping the 11-5 favored Norton at 1:58 of the first round after knocking him down twice.

"I really feel in all sincerity I'll beat Holmes next time," said Shavers who earned the WBC's No. 1 ranking and a September title shot with his deastating victory. Shavers lost a one-sided 12-round decision to Holmes here last March 25.

"I'm gonna knock him (Shavers) out," said Holmes, who rode his victory over Shavers into a title bid against Norton, which he won on a split decision here last June 9. "I'm not Kenny Norton. When I back up I know what I'm doing."

But first Holmes will fight Mike Weaver, the No. 8 WBC contender who has a 23-8 record.

"It's signed and sealed," said promoter Don King, adding that he wants to put it on in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Ocasio, who didn't lose face from his first loss in only 14 pro fights, may find himself in the ring against an ex-champion. "They talked to me today about fighting Leon Spinks in six months," said Bill Daley, Ocasio's manager.

With things looking up for Shavers and the boxing picture still bright for the 23-year-old Ocasio, what does the future hold for Norton? He has been a major factor in the heavyweight division ever since he broke Muhammad Ali's jaw and scored a split 12-round decision as a virtual unknown in 1973.

"He's gone now," said Holmes of Norton.

"I don't know," the 33-year-old Norton said. "I can't make up my mind right now."

About his second knockout loss — he was stopped in two rounds by George Foreman in a title bid in 1974 — Norton said: "He did to me what I wanted to do to him. No excuses."

Norton, who weighed 225 to 210 for Shavers, had the best of the first exchanges of the fight. Then he backed to the ropes and Shavers was on him. Shavers shot home a left hook to the temple and followed with a right uppercut.

Norton reeled along the ropes, Shavers followed punching. Finally Norton went down in the centre of the ring. He struggled up and was decked by a right uppercut. Referee Miles Lane started to count, then stopped the fight. Norton wouldn't have beaten a 10 count.

"I'm still the baddest heavyweight in the world," said Holmes, who shares the title with the 37-year-old Ali, who is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association. But in boxing circles Holmes, 29, is considered the premier heavyweight.

Holmes simply had too much of everything for Ocasio — height, reach and most of all experience — but he didn't consider the bout a mismatch.

"It wasn't no mismatch," said Holmes. "It was just my ability. So don't sell me short. I've proved myself."

Swiss Rink Captures Women's Curling Title

PERTH, Scotland (CP) — Gaby Casanova and her Switzerland rink, playing together this year for the first time, made it a runaway in the final game of the world women's invitational curling championship Friday, defeating Sweden 13-5.

Casanova, who said she was suprised her rink even won the women's title in Switzerland, advanced to the final with a surprising 6-3 verdict earlier in the day over Lindsay Sparkes and her Canadian rink from North Vancouver.

Brigitta Torn, who skipped her Swedish rink from Stockholm to the best record in round-robin play with eight wins and two defeats, beat Scotland's Beth Lindsay 7-5 in the other semi-final game.

"We were very surprised when we won the Swiss championship," Casanova said. "We came here and said we just didn't want to be the last one."

The Swiss rink, which included lead Rosi Manger, second Linda Thommen and third Betty Bourquin, wound up the round-robin section at 7-3 — the same as Canada, the U.S., France and Scotland.

Mixed Champion

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Roy Lund rink of Dryden, Ont., from a town without a curling arena and representing Northern Ontario, captured the Canadian mixed curling championship Friday with a 7-5 sudden-death playoff win over Bob Widdis of Etobicoke, Ont.

The playoff was forced earlier Friday when Northern Ontario fell 7-5 to Nova Scotia's Lowell Goulden in an extra end, while Ontario was defeating Newfoundland's Jim Burden 8-6.

Northern Ontario and Ontario finished the round-robin with 9-2 records.

Dryden has been without a curling club for a year, because the old one burned last March.

Braves Breeze

Saanich Braves dominated play much of the way Friday as they breezed past Port Alberni Timberman 7-1 in the opening game in a best-of-three series for the Vancouver Island junior "B" hockey championship.

Second game will be played in Pearkes Arena tonight at 7:30, and the third, if needed, Sunday at 11 a.m.

Wayne Himmelman scored three goals to pace Braves. Ed Beauchemin, Steve Craig, Murray McLaren and Wayne Larsen added singles. Bruce Wood counted the lone goal for Alberni, defending Island champion.

The winner advances to the Pacific Coast final next weekend.

Cook, Brown Emerge With Fivepin Honors

Powerful middle games helped boost both Eileen Cook and Don Brown into the fivepin winners' circle during the 22nd week of competition in the 16th annual Victoria Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Eileen captured the women's award with a 195-378-304 — 877 series in the Commercial League at Miracle Lanes in Sidney and Don collected men's laurels with a 258-370-274 — 902 series in the Wednesday Majors League at Town and Country Lanes.

Happy Family Attitude Works Well for Sabres

Times News Services

Buffalo Sabres are one big, happy family these days and their togetherness is producing National Hockey League victories for interim coach Billy Inglis.

The Sabres scored three times in the third period Friday night to edge Vancouver Canucks 4-3 and Inglis said the close-knit team spirit had much to do with the come-from-behind effort in Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum.

"We had a real good feeling about this game, and I think a lot of it had to do with that long bus ride from Seattle the other night," said Inglis, who has coached Buffalo to a 24-15-9 record since taking over from the fired Marcel Pronovost.

"Our travel connections got messed up and we missed the plane here from Seattle. That three-hour bus ride gave us lots of time to talk hockey. I ask the players a lot of questions and we all exchange views on various aspects of the game. Like I said, we've got a real good feeling on this team."

The Sabres have won four straight games and now hold an eight-point lead over third-place Toronto Maple Leafs in the Adams Division.

Richard Martin broke a 3-3 tie at 12:05 of the final period when he deflected a shot past Vancouver netminder Dunc Wilson during a three-on-two break, completing the comeback. The Canucks had led 3-1 going into the last 20 minutes.

Craig Ramsay scored for Buffalo just 31 seconds into the third period and Danny Gare scored at 1:07, tying the score at 3-3. Andre Savard fired the other Buffalo goal.

The Canucks got goals from Stan Smyl and Ron Sedlbauer on power plays in the second period and a first-period marker from rookie centre Thomas Gradin, giving him 20 for the season.

The loss ended a three-game unbeaten string for the Canucks and left them seven points ahead of third-place St. Louis Blues in the Smythe Division. Vancouver has seven games remaining and St. Louis eight in the fight for a playoff berth.

Sedlbauer's goal was his 39th of the season — and 14th power-play marker — and set a single-season Vancouver team record formerly shared by Don Lever and Bobby Schmautz.

Wilson played a strong game until the final period and finished with 21 saves, while netminder Don Edwards of the Sabres blocked 22 shots. Sedlbauer had nine shots on goal for the Canucks.

In the only other game Friday, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Atlanta 4-1 to boost their third-place margin over the Flames in the Patrick Division to three points. Both teams will make the playoffs.

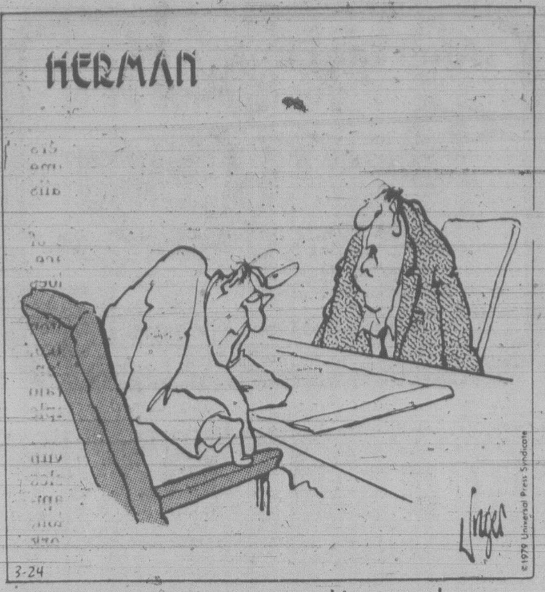
Trophy at Stake

DUNCAN — Rinks skipped by Bill Osborne of Qualicum and Lyle Richert of New Westminster squared off this morning in a match to decide possession of the Guy Philip Trophy, emblematic of the Pacific Coast Senior Curling Association championship.

Osborne defeated Tosh Nigai of Haney 6-3 and then toppled Glen Meadows' Ralph Stevenson 8-3 in Friday games to advance to the final. Richert beat Stevenson 7-4 and Nigai 6-3.

All four rinks move to Qualicum Sunday for the opening of the British Columbia seniors championship, which also will include four interior rinks.



"Doc, can you give me something to make me feel a bit more energetic?"

No Trouble for Lanny

(AP) — The wind, said Jack Nicklaus, was just a little bit too strong.

"Walking along No. 8 out there, I saw two mallards trying to take off," he said. "The wind was too strong. They couldn't make it. Couldn't get airborne. They finally just waddled up on the bank."

But those strong gusts, which returned the tough Sawgrass links to their normal unforgiving character, bothered Lanny Wadkins not at all. In fact, he said, it may have helped.

"It's funny, but the harder the wind blew, the better I seemed to putt," said Wadkins, who boldly attacked the course and emerged from Friday's second round of the Tournament Players Championship with a four-under-par 68 and a three-shot lead.

Under the conditions, Wadkins said, "it's maybe the finest round of golf I ever played."

The statement would be difficult to dispute. He escaped without a bogey and called that "maybe a greater accomplishment than the score."

Nicklaus, who had 73 for 140, agreed.

Only George Burns could keep Wadkins in sight, and he had to make eight birdies and shoot a course record-matching 66 to do it. Wadkins was at 135, nine strokes under par, and Burns had a 138 total.

Lee Trevino, who said he has returned to an old set of irons with which he won the 1971 U.S. Open, manoeuvered his way to a 69 and a tie at 139 with Bill Kratzert and Dan Halldorson of Brandon, Man., each of whom shot a 70.

NEWSLETTER for VANCOUVER ISLAND RACE CAR FANS

This ad not paid for or endorsed by Western Speedway or Vancouver Island Track Racing Association

FACT: Nascar is the best racing association in North America.

FACT: Western Speedway deprived race fans of Nascar racing in Victoria for 1979 by telling Ken Piper, Nascar regional director, that his race cars were not wanted. (Nascar received the back gate.)

FACT: For 10 years the International Drivers Challenge has promoted the best open competition stock car racing in the northwest and Victoria and Nanaimo race fans have enjoyed this racing by Canadian and U.S. top drivers. Western Speedway effectively stopped this series. (I.D.C. received the back gate.)

FACT: For 25 years Vancouver Island Track Racing Association (also merged with VARA) combined with mid-Island Racing Association (Nanaimo) have given Victoria and Nanaimo race fans the best local racing of any place in Canada and produced outstanding open competition drivers.

FACT: Due to the take it or leave attitude of Western Speedway negotiators, Vitra was forced out of racing in 1979. (Vitra receives the back gate.)

FACT: Capital City Go Cart Club has raced at Western Speedway for over 15 years and gave valuable racing experience for these drivers, Terry Forsyth, Billy Hitchcocks, Roy Haslam and Gary Kershaw.

FACT: With almost double the rental plus maintaining the grounds, Capital City Go Cart Club has been forced to find an alternate site.

FACT: Vitra raced for a sliding scale of 40% to 50% in 1978 (plus back gate), were offered 40% and no back gate for 1979.

FACT: Demolition participants raced in 1978 without an organization (and forbidden by Speedway Management to form one) for no back gate and 16.5% of the take in.

From these facts it is not difficult to reason that the Management of Western Speedway is not too interested in the quality of racing it will give Victoria fans but is interested in squeezing the race car participants and fans of every nickle.

The back gate is the money paid by the drivers, mechanics and other race associated people to enter the pits with their cars to race for the fans and the Speedway. This money is used by the participating club to make up purse guarantees, points fund for the top cars at the end of the year, insurance for pit personnel and drivers. This is the racers own money.

Comments and assistance with future newsletters may be sent to VICTORIA PRESS BOX 617.

Donna Steps Out in Front

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — JoAnne Carner followed her course-record 64 in the first round of the $100,000 Sahara National pro-am golf tournament with a 73 in the second round. It wasn't difficult to figure out why.

"I used 35 putts today, 11 more than Thursday," said Carner, who is shooting for her second straight Ladies Professional Golf Association victory. "It's always hard to follow a really low round."

Donna Caponi Young carded a four-under-par 69 at the Las Vegas Country Club Friday, giving her a 36-hole score of 135 and a two-stroke lead over Carner at the midway point of the tournament.

The original field of 72 was cut to low 62 for the final two rounds, which will be played at Sahara. A score of 152 was necessary to make the cut.

Trilec's Chances Chilled

SAINT JOHN, N.B. — Nova Scotia All-Stars of Halifax and Windsor AKO, the defending Canadian junior men's basketball champions from Ontario, both won their semi-final games Friday to qualify for today's title showdown while the best Victoria Trilec can hope for is a third-place finish.

The Nova Scotians, who upset Windsor earlier in the tournament, beat Trilec, the British Columbia champions, 66-52, and Windsor stopped Memorial University Beothuks of Newfoundland 70-67 in a game that went right to the wire.

In Friday's other game, Saskatoon Holy Cross Grads of Saskatchewan defeated Edmonton Blazers of Alberta 70-65 to advance to the playoff game for fifth place today against St. Vital Grads of Manitoba.

Victoria was to play Newfoundland for third place.

"Before the tournament started I saw only a glimmer in the players abilities," said Nova Scotia coach Claude MacLachlan. "The glimmer is still there. We can play much better. We were playing at about 35 per cent against Victoria and got away with it."

He said a great deal of hard work and team effort were the key to the win, but Nova Scotia scouted B.C. during round-robin play "more than they did us."

Both Victoria and Nova Scotia have one six-foot-seven player but Trilec has more overall height.

"We scouted them to find a way of blocking them out, and that's just what we did," MacLachlan said.

Geoff MacIver had 23 points and Shawn Parker had 18 for Nova Scotia. Scott MacLachlin, the coach's son, had 15.

Darrell Johnson had 12 ponts for British Columbia and Gwyn Shipman had 10.

Windsor captain Dwayne Matthews had 25 points and Wayne Lauzon had 16.

Try Crossing Ireland by Train

By J. H. SILVERMAN

CORK CITY, Ireland — With a coal fire roaring under its boiler the century-old steam engine, known simply as No. 184 of the Great Southern and Western Railroad, pulled into Harbor Station here some months ago hauling yellow wooden carriages and a luggage van.

Among its passengers were film stars Sean Connery, Donald Sutherland and Lesley Anne Down.

The reason for the trip was the filming of "The Great Train Robbery", the movie about Edward Pierce who stole a fortune in gold bound for the Crimea in 1855 from a train speeding between London and Foldstone.

Why Ireland rather than Britain for the film? The producers found better locations here among the Georgian cities and green country hills which they believed provided a more authentic atmosphere.

The recreated journey started from Dublin's Heuston Station and ended here in Cork.

Visitors from Canada to Ireland might take a leaf from the film producers. Although the great Southern engine is now a museum piece, one of the more delightful ways to see the Emerald Isle is through the windows of the comfortable coach trains run by Coras Iompair Eireann, the Irish transport company locally referred to as the CIE.

Heuston Station, the starting point for a journey from Dublin to Cork, is a remarkable Renaissance palazzo designed in the grand manner of the Victorian era. To this reporter's mind, it is one of the finest pieces of railway architecture in Europe and today is being properly preserved as a national monument — as are its sister stations along the way, such as the castle-like Port Arlington. The whole endeavor is very satisfying for those to whom the past is precious.

If you are lucky enough on your journey to meet a veteran trainman like Cyril Ferris from County Wicklow, you will learn fascinating facts at first-hand which you might well miss travelling on your own. In between local station announcements he fills you in on all sorts of details. "To your right on the opposite bank of the Liffey is Phoenix Park, the largest enclosed public park in Europe. It houses the Dublin Zoo, second oldest in the world and famous for, of all things, breeding lion cubs for export to Africa."

Well down in the countryside as the passenger load thins out, he may have time to pass on the information that the famous Grand Canal actually crosses over the River Barrow by way of an aquaduct.

Just past Droichead Nua the train crosses The Curragh, the great plain of Kildare. The area of open land extending over 5,000 acres is the home of Irish racing and the suggestion is made that a visitor to Irelnd would suffer a loss if he were to pass up the chance to see the National Stud at nearby Tully.

On to Monasterevan with its Moore Abbey, a mansion built on the site of an ancient Cistercian foundation. It was once the residence of the great Irish tenor, John McCormack, and is now a home run by the Sisters of Charity.

"We're coming up to Goold's Cross," said Mr. Ferris just after he guided me to the dining bar for a restorative cup of tea and a finger sandwich. "Near here is Cashel, seat of the Kings of Munster for nearly 800 years. Just past it we will travel through our largest state forest along the foothills of the Slievefelim Mountains which stretch norht to the River Shannon."

At Rathluirc the trains enters Cork County and passengers are provided with information that to the left lie the Ballyhoura Hills, Doneraile, and ruins of Kilcolman Castle, home of the Elizabethan poet Edmund Spencer.

Farther on lies Mallow and the area called Machaire Mer na Mumhan — the Golden Vale — well known for its butter and cream. Mallow was once famous for a spa, now closed, that drew its waters from a well in the basement of a house. Foxhunting, an Irish sport where the pursued survives, is popular in this area.

At Cork's Harbor Station, Mr. Ferris, as a parting gift, reminds the visitor that Cork City is fine but the coast is absolutely marvellous, especially Kinsale. You walk out of the station and into the city described by the poet, Spencer, "The spreading Lee, that like an island fayre, encloseth Corke, with his divided flood."

200th RUNNING OF DERBY DAY

Derby Day, the most famous day in the English racing calendar, will be more popular than ever this year, with thousands flocking to see the 200th running of the famous race (June 6), held at Epsom, Surrey, 16 miles south of London.

The Derby dates back to a meeting of England's leading sportsmen held at The Oaks in Epsom (now the name of another famous race), home of the 12th Earl of Derby. There were nine runners in the first race, held on May 4, 1780; it was run over a mile course and the first winner was Diomed, a horse later sold for a mere $106 (approx).

This year's Epsom Summer Meeting, opening with the 200th Derby Stakes, also includes the Coronation Cup (June 7); Canada Day (June 8); and the 201st Oaks Stakes on June 9.

The Oaks, also one of the great classic races, began a year before the Derby and is named after the house owned by the 12th Earl.

London's Royal Academy, Piccadilly, will also join in the Derby celebrations with a special exhibition, Derby Day 200, from April 5 - July 1. Paintings, engravings, drawings, cartoons, sculptures, photographs and pamphlets will follow the history of the great race, and the owners, breeders, trainers, horses and jockeys, led by Fred Archer, Steve Donoghue and Lester Piggott, will be represented.

The famous and infamous Derbys will be coverd, such as the "Running Rein" in 1844, when corruption reached its peak; 1896, when the Prince of Wales won with Persimmon; and the "Suffragette" Derby in 1913, when Miss Emily Davison killed herself under the hooves of Anmer, the King's Derby contender.

Knowing More about Jet Lag Helps

NEW YORK — A half century ago, when jet travel was not even an aviator's dream, Wiley Post, who piloted his monoplane around the world in eight days, had already discovered what we now call "jet lag." Post recognized the disruption of body rhythms caused by rapidly changing time zones and worked out a program to counter the deleterious effects of altered sleep-wake cycles on flying effiency.

Nowadays, every year millions of people — most of them pasengers rather than pilots — cross four or more time zones in a matter of hours. Watches are easily reset to local time, but bodies tend to lag behind. For days, multitime-zone travelers are likely to find themselves getting hungry and sleepy at the "wrong" times.

At the current speed of air travel, as many as six time zones can be crossed in as little as six hours off schedule, according to the local time. Coast-to-coast flights cross five or six time zones, and trans-Pacific flights cross eight. If you fly from New York to New Delhi, you land with your body exactly half a day off: day is night and night is day. Since such abrupt changes in time zones did not occur while the human species was evolving, we are not in any way equipped to make the necessary adjustments rapidly.

While virtually all travelers are aware of the effects on sleeping and eating patterns, few may realize that in abruptly changing multiple time zones, they throw more than 100 different bodily functions out of whack.

Normal circadian rhythms for a host of biological activities are no longer in synchrony. Included are not only the accustomed times to sleep and eat, but also much less obvious cycles as those for body temperature, breathing, heart rate, hormonal output, urine and blood constituents, and the chemical activities of the kidneys, liver, digestive tract and central nervous system.

This disruption of the body's many internal clocks can detract from the joy of a vacation. It pays, therefore, to know the possible effects of jet lag and how they may be mitigated or, at least, accommodated.

Studies of people subjected to real and laboratory-created "phase shifts," as disruptions of circadian rhythm are called, have revealed that—decrements occur in mental alertness, reaction time, short-term memory, grip strength, ability to solve simple mathematical problems and performance of complex psychomotor tasks (such as piloting a flight simulator). Such diminished abilities may last for two of three days after a "flight" across several times zones.

Biological functions vary in the length of time it takes for them to adapt to a time change of four or more hours. Whereas a person may adjust in a few days to a new sleep-wake and eating cycle, daily rhythms in hormones and body temperature may take a week or two to catch up. It may be two weeks or longer before all the disrupted rhythmic functions become resynchronized. In general, it takes one day to adapt for each time zone crossed.

Although there is no way to prevent the disruption of your body clock short of flying only directly north or south, studies of jet lag have revealed a number of tips to help mitigate the symptoms. They include the following:

- Prepare your body rhythms to the time zone of your destination. Starting several days before departure, gradually change your eating and sleeping schedule. If you're going to be flying west, go to bed and hour later each day (and sleep later in the morning). If you're flying east, go to bed and arise earlier each day.

- If you're just crossing one to two time zones and will be gone only a few days, keep your watch — and your schedule — on home time.

- For longer trips, be sure you are well rested before staring out. Avoid eating heavy meals or drinking alcoholic beverages just before or during the flight. The combined "effects of alcohol and altitude greatly enhance fatigue, and two or three drinks consumed at 5,000 feet (the altitude to which the cabin is pressurized) have the physiological effect of three or four drinks at sea level.

- Similarly, avoid smoking during flight. The accumulation of carbon monoxide in your blood combined with the effects of an altitude of 5,000 feet is equivalent to the fatigue from lack of oxygen experienced at 10,000 feet.

- Schedule your flight so that you arrive as close to your regular bedtime as possible. Then go to bed and try to sleep through to a reasonable waking hour at your destination. If you're flying eastward and will be arriving at midday local time (bedtime on your body's clock), don't schedule any demanding activities or a night on the town for the remainder of that day. Instead, eat a light meal and go to bed "early."

- If you have trouble falling asleep, take a warm bath, get some exercise (run around the room if need be) or read a boring book. But avoid tranquilizers, sleeping pills and alcohol. These can further interfere with sleep patterns that are already disrupted.

More Tourists Seeking 'Learning Experiences'

By PETER TONGE

NEW YORK — In a New York apartment, Marcella Hazan makes pasta and other classic Italian dishes that bring smiles to the town fathers of faraway Bologna. they know that tourism in their beautiful city and province of Emilia Romagna will be going up again.

The best way to a tourist's heart, they have discovered, is through is or her stomach. And no one, it seems, is doing a better job for them than Mrs. Hazan here in New York.

Touring just to see the sights and breathe some foreign air still may be reason enough for many to go travelling. But increasingly, people want to return from distant lands with more than memories, some colored slides, and a trinket or two. They want a practical learning experience. They want to use their vacation to acquire new skills or bone up on existing ones, while taking in the sights and sounds as well.

The courses taken by this breed of tourist involve everything from woodcarving to sky-diving. But the most popular, by far, is cooking.

The French have lured travellers to their land this way for decades. So have the Swiss. Gourmet's Oxford is a top British program. Indeed, learning to cook is a tourism feature to a greater or lesser extent in most European countries. Italy is no exception, but it was the cooking schools of Rome and Milan that drew the tourists. And until Marcella Hazan came along most people thought of Bologna as a cold cut rather than an Italian city.

Now, increasingly, people are learning that Bologna is the attractive porticoed capital of one of the most agriculturally rich provinces in the country: the area that produces the unique Parmigiano cheese (two years from skim milk to finished product), Parma hams, tomato preserves, and pastas.

It all began 10 years ago when Mrs. Hazan, who earned a doctorate in natural science and biology, began teaching her cooking skills to small classes (six at a time) in her New York apartment. It was a success from the beginning and quickly led to a book, Classic Italian Cooking (Knopf), and recently, a follow-up appropriately titles More Classic Italian Cooking.

It is inevitable in classes such as these that lessons are laced with such comments as "in Italy we do this," and "in Bologna we do that." She also colors her commentary with descriptions of the wheat-filled countryside, of the towns and villages, of bustling markets, and of fish fresh off the boat that is cooked right on the quayside.

Apparently, Mrs. Hazan proved stimulating enough for a group of her students to come forward with a request. "Take us to Italy," they said, "and teach us right where it all happens." So she did. That was in 1967.

That first year, she taught for three weeks in Bologna; in '68, it was four weeks. Last year, it was for six weeks. This year, she will teach for 9 weeks.

For a traditionally non-tourist city, all this culinary intrest has made a marked difference in the number of visitors to Bologna and its surroundings. City authorities calculate that tourism to the area has jumped 25 per cent as a direct result of Mrs. Hazan. So last year, they built modern kitchens at a cost of some $100,00 for her exclusive use during the summer months.

What Mrs. Hazan always longed to do, she says in her first book, "was to take my students and readers beyond a recipe's boundaries into that special, joyous way of life that flows around the making and partaking of an Italian meal."

She does that very effectively, according to the internationally known food commentator James A. Beard, who was an observer at one of her courses in Bologna in 1977. And Danny Kaye, who took a course that same year, summed up his appreciation on an autographed picture which reads: "To marcella, Ti abraccio (I embrace you), Danny."

Certainly the courses involve much more than just cooking.

The courses, which run intermittently from may through October, cost $1,000 for one-week and $1,800 for two weeks, excluding air fare. For further details, write Marcella Hazan, 155 E. 76th Street, New York.

The King of Cheeses Now Threatened

By SANDRA SALMANS

MELTON MOWBRAY, England — The future of Stilton, the blue-veined king of English cheeses, is threatened for the first time in its 300-year history.

A rich seam of coal, estimated at 500 million tons — the biggest recoverable coal reserve in western Europe — has been found in northeast Leicestershire, the tradtional heart of Stilton-making country.

If the British goverment decides to mine the coal, the placid farmlands within could be, within a decade, transformed by the appearance of mine shafts and slag heaps, only a half-mile from some of the 12 Stilton dairies.

While no one is certain whether mining activities would imperil Stilton production, dairymen can recite a formidable list of potential dangers: reduced grazing land, coal dust in the atmosphere, land subsidence that could crack dairy walls.

"We have voiced our concern to the National Coal Board and they have gone to great lengths to reassure us," said Glyn Allaway, secretary of the Stilton Cheesemakers' Association here. "But we're not convinced yet."

Because of its fragility during production, the dairymen fear that Stilton could prove exceptionally vulnerable to changes in the area. They point out that mining would seriously reduce the amount of grazing land available, which in turn would reduce the supply of local milk. Stilton dairymen would have to buy more milk from other parts of England, which could affect the taste of the cheese.

Subsidence of the land, they say, could crack dairy walls, disturbing the controlled humidity and temperature necessary for the curing of the cheese. "If that happened, 5,000 to 10,000 wheels of cheese could be spoiled overnight," said Alfred Wyman, technical manager at Long Clawson Dairy Ltd.

Some small dairies rely on simply fly screens to filter incoming air, and could be overwhelmed by a blast of coal dust.

The coal board is contending that, with underground mining, there would be no coal dust or land subsidence, "but we don't believe that," Wyman said.

Dairymen are not the only participants in the coal-mining debate. The opposition is, in fact, an improbable mix of environmentalists, hunters and farmers, led by the Duke of Rutland. The duke, who owns several thousand acres of the coal-rich Vale of Belvoir (pronounced here as "beaver"), has vowed to throw his body in the path of the first bulldozer.

Stilton, the only trademarked cheese in Britain, may by law be produced only in the three counties — Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire — that have historically provided both the environment and the skill required.

Produced in farmouses until the turn of the century, the cheese acquired its name when it was sold at the Bell Inn in the town of Stilton, a stagecoach stop between London and York. Today it is made by a dozen dairies in the three countries, and the process has been sanitized and shortened but otherwise unchanged. Stilton requires three to four months of ripening and an infinite amount of patience.

The process begins with the running of lukewarm, pasteurized milk into large vats, to which are added bacteria that promote acidity and an enzyme to hasten clotting. The whey is drained off, the curd forms and settles and, the following morning, is mixed with salt and packed into large, stainless steel hoops.

After draining in the hoops for six days, the cheeses are "rubbed" to create an even surface. Each cheese is then wrapped in a diaperlike cloth for 24 hours before it is left to stand on its own.

At the Hose Dairy near here, the cheese is then carried into the "white" room where, in 80 per cent humidity and 50 degree temperature, it begins to form a yellow coat. After three weeks, some of the cheese is packaged and sold as white Stilton.

To become blue Stilton, however, the cheese must be moved to the dairy's enormous "blue" room. There each cheese — the room can hold 5,000 — receives some 300 punctures from stainless steel needles, allowing oxygen to enter and the blue mold to form. As it has been all through the process, each cheese is turned over by hand daily to guarantee an even texture throughout.

After several weeks, the cheese is moved to a colder room where it forms the distinctive rough brownish crust of traditional blue Stilton. But before the cheese leaves the dairy, the manager eases a cheese "iron" — similar to a hollowed-out pencil — through the crust in two places. He sniffs the extracted cheese, examines it for an even spread of veins and inspects the iron for a creamy film, which indicates a high fat content.

If the signs are all right, he returns the sample to the cheese, deftly turning the iron to plug the hole.

The result of this labor-intensive process is a cheese with a unique taste, described variously by its adherents as sweet, salty or mellow — but always more subtle than any other blue-veined cheese. "As far as we're concerned, there is only one cheese," declared James William, manager of the Stilton dairy owned by Unigate, Britain's largest dairy company.

"Each cheese receives 300 punctures to allow oxygen to enter and form a blue mold"

Never a Dull Moment In Old Slovak Town

BRATISLAVA — Travellers interested in medieval history, architecture and lifestyle, can have a field day here in Slovakia, the eastern region of Czechoslovakia.

The origin of most Slovak towns dates back to the 12th century when their cores began to take shape from the centralizing of the original settlements. The development of these settlements into medieval towns was influenced by several factors, chief among them being:

- Their locations on old trade rotes which affected the growth of trade and handicrafts.
- The proximity to ore deposits or their siting on a strategic location for the defense of a region.
- The German colonization following the Tartar invasion, when German settlers brought their urban culture with them and were given some special privileges.

Each phase of development left its architectural mark either in individual buildings or in entities built within the medieval ground plan of the town. Today, in order to preserve these monuments, the utmost attention is being paid to their conservation and restoration. In fact, the Czechoslovak State Institute for the Care of Historical Monuments has declared that the preserved historical cores of some Slovak towns are to be considered protected city reservations. Each year, millions of crowns are set aside for this purpose.

It would be impossible in the space available to cover all of the towns so protected or to go into detail on any one of them, but here are a few of the highlights to be found in some of them.

BRATISLAVA

The protected section of the Slovak capital includes Bratislava Castle which overlooks the city and the Danube River. The castle is the dominant historical and architectural feature of Bratislava, and was (and still is) the historical core of the town which at the end of the 13th century was surrounded by walls. These walls were demolished over the second half of the 18th century and today the only remaining structure from the walled system is Michalska (Michael's) Gate, a favorite photographic subject with modern tourists.

Adjacent to the main square of the Old Town are two notable buildings that are worth a visit, the Old Town Hall and the Primacialne (Archbishop's) Palace. The Town Hall, now a museum, is built around two courtyards that are used in spring for concerts given as part of the Bratislava Spring Music Festival.

The beautifully decorated Archbishop's Palace, now essentially an art gallery, possesses an excellent collection of tapestries, including six English productions from the early 17th century illustrating the Greek legend of Hector and Lysander. The most impressive room is the Hall of Mirrors where the Peace of Pressburg (the old Austro-Hungarian name for the city) was signed by Napoleon and the Hapsburg Emperor Francis I following the French victory at Austerlitz over the combined armies of Austria and Russia.

LEVOCA

Not far from the other end of Slovakia is Levoca, a town that sprang up "on the green meadow" following the destruction of the original old settlement by the Tartars in 1241. The centre of attention here is a square on which are located the town hall (now the Spis Museum) and the parish Church of St. James the Elder with its priceless high altar carved of wood between 1507 and 1518 and which itself is a national monument. Part of the altar was displayed at the Czechoslovak Pavilion at the Montreal World Fair in 1967 and partly because of that the church has become a leading tourist attraction with visitors from the West touring eastern Slovakia. The main altar stands 60 feet high and almost 20 feet wide. Master Paul, the creator of this work, used limewood to carve "The Last Supper" and Levoca merchants as models when carving the 12 disciples.

KREMNICA

Midway between Bratislava and Levoca lies the old gold mining centre of Kremnica, declared a town by King Charles Robert in 1328, at which time the people there had been mining gold for more than 300 years.

The protected section today includes the town castle, the Gothic Church of St. Catherine surrounded by triple walls, and the remains of a Gothic town hall (the ground floor survives). The centre of the Old Town boasts some of the finest Gothic burgher house in all of Slovakia, with many of them now being used as public offices, museums and galleries, two other buildings worth visiting are the old 14th century mint and the present mint (the town still mints coins) which was built in the midle of the 15th century.

BARDEJOV

To visit the spa town of Bardejov near the Polish border northeast of Levoca is to step back into the Middle Ages. It is almost as if time had stood still. The medieval fortifications appear the way they were when first built and in some cases the original plaster holds the bastions together. Old burgher houses, the Old Town and the Saint Egidius Church are the chief architectural gems. The church has eleven Gothic aisle altars, the biggest number of such altars of any Gothic church in central Europe.

Canadians interested in obtaining more detailed information on Slovakia's old towns should write to CEDOK, theCzechoslovak travel bureau, which maintains a North American office at 10 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Addis Ababa: No More Gunshots

DAVID OTTAWAY

ADDIS ABABA (WP) — After two years of "red terror" and "white terror" that left thousands dead in the streets of this rugged East African capital, calm has returned to the city and its residents are breathing freely once again.

"I haven't heard a gun shot ever since I arrived here last July," remarked one Western diplomat.

"It's been so quiet for so long now people are almost edgy," said a European woman married to an Ethiopian. "We're not just to it."

Less than nine months ago, Addis Ababa was the scene of fierce factional infighting groups struggling to gain control of Ethiopia's runaway revolution that had swept aside the late emperor Haile Selassie in September 1974 and that had shaken his feudal society to its very foundations.

From street turmoil, a group of junior army officers emerged to topple the emperor, abolish the 2,000-year-old monarchy, free the peasantry from a state of semi-serfdom and set the mountain empire on a radical pro-Soviet Marxist course.

By early 1977, the capital had become a veritable battlefield as "hit" squads from rival political factions took to assassinating each other's supporters in broad daylight on the streets. From dusk to dawn, gunfire echoed across this sprawling mountainside city, dogs howled in despair and residents huddled in their homes scared to death that some unknown executioner would knock at the door.

In the morning, city residents would find bodies dotting the streets and sidewalks, many bearing crude signs warning other unnamed "enemies of the revolution" of a similar fate.

At least six civilian and military groups — most of them espousing nearly identical versions of Marxism-Leninism — fought for control of the reins of power, the key issue being whether officers or civilian revolutionaries would ultimately rule this Red Sea nation of 30 million people.

Nobody really knows how many died in the blood struggle for power that lasted until mid-1978. But one estimate of the death toll of students and youth alone here in the capital puts the number at between 1,700 and 2,500.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, estimates that 30,000 prisoners were held at the height of the "red terror" from December 1977 to February 1978 and that 5,000 persons were summarily executed across the country.

No other black African country has experienced such intense and prolonged political turmoil in its capital, and Ethiopians are hard put today to explain the extent of the violence and their own incredible behavior.

"The revolution did something to the psychology of the Ethiopians," remarked one puzzled civil servant. "I just cannot understand what got into us."

"We now admit there were unnecessary excesses and killings," remarked one Ethiopian official very unofficially.

The military-led government accused its opponents of being "petty bourgeois reactionaries" and of mounting a "white terror" to reverse the revolution. It retaliated by unleashing its own "red terror" in the image of the Soviet Bolsheviks hunting down white Russians.

Today, the bloody power struggle is virtually over. Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam has emerged as the undisputed leader of the ruling provisional military council after outwitting and ruthlessly striking down a half dozen of his colleagues. At parades, he sits up front alone on the dias in one of the late emperor's old gold gilted and red velvet backed armchairs and rides alone in one of Haile Selassie's old royal Cadillacs.

Mengistu's portrait, with him dressed in simple, unbemedalled military uniform, hangs in the same golden frame in the lobby of the Hilton Hotel where the emperor dressed in regal attire once used to look down on visitors.

The only other pictures in government offices and public places, sometimes larger than his, are those of Marx, Lenin and Engels.

Mengistu's most determined civilian opponents, grouped in the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Party, have been all but physically wiped off the face of Ethiopia, although some diehard remnants continue their struggle in and around the old castle-filled city of Gondar, 450 miles northwest of the capital.

Four other civilian groups have sought to outmanoeuvre Mengistu and all have failed, leaving many of their members dead, in prison or exile. The winner has been the military's own faction, which is now preparing to set up a military-led political party to lead the five-year-old revolution.

The political struggle that wracked this capital for so long has left residents exhausted, numb, intimidated and hungry for the enjoyment of even the old small pleasures of Ethoipian social life.

Despite the midnight-to-dawn curfew in force since the first days of the revolution, gas rationing, shortages of some key commodities and other war-related hardship, social life seems to be reviving albeit in a far less sumptuous style than during the emperor's reign.

Hotel bars and restaurants are full again at night and Addis Ababans who can wrangle enough gas have resumed their old habit of traveling for the weekend to Lake Langano, a two-hour drive south of the city.

The roads are once again safe throughout central Shoa Province and most of the southern and western ones, although road blocks are still common on the outskirts of most towns.

Here in the capital, the army has taken over from the unpredictable neighborhood militias the task of policing the curfew but those caught out after midnight are now simply adminished and sent politely on their way home rather than being shot or led off to the nearest jail to spend the night behind bars.

Addis Ababans credit the army with controlling and disciplining the powerful neighborhood associations, called kebeles. Their unruly militias were once the worst offenders of law and order.

Perhaps the most positive aspect of the kebele militias is that theft and crime generally have practically disappeared from the capital. This compares to most other African capitals where crime of all kinds tends to run rampant.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

For more than 30 years I, as a pastor, have been dealing with bereaved people, officiating at funeral services on their behalf and offering them pastoral care. Through the years I have learned to take in my stride many of things I must do as a pastor, but every funeral is still for me an emotionally demanding exercise which requires of me much more than mere professional adroitness.

Let me tell you something of what a funeral generally entails for a pastor. It begins with a visit to the bereaved to try to afford them some comfort and assurance in the first shock of bereavement and to discuss with them the details of the funeral service.

Then there is the service itself. Today most people ask for a fairly brief, simple service. I favor that kind of service, one consisting mostly of readings from the Bible and appropriate prayers. I give a sermon or eulogy at a funeral only when aked to do so by the bereaved. Then there is the committal at the cemetery or the crematorium.

I believe that funerals are primarily for the living, that the principal justification for them is in the comfort and healing they can afford the grief-stricken. Most people suffering a bereavement do benefit from the gathering around them of relatives and friends: awareness of the sharing of sorrow does itself have comforting and healing power.

Pastors today are asked to officiate at many funerals for families which have no active church affiliation—although often they will name the church from which they dropped out, generally some years earlier.

I see difficulties ahead: in many communities, particularly the larger ones, the number of pastors is decreasing as the population increases. At times bereaved families, and the funeral directors who serve them, have difficulty finding clergy to take funerals on short notice—and almost all funerals are held on short notice.

Pastors, of course, must give top priority to funerals involving their parishioners. Some now decline to take funerals for outsiders. I can understand that attitude, although I cannot adopt it myself: I give the benefit of any doubts I may have when asked to take funerals for those with no church affiliation. My old-fashiond pastoral conscience will not let me be as tough as I sometimes think I should be.

Funerals are but one of the many duties a pastor has. And I have sensed in recent years that with declines in active church affiliations more and more demands are being made on a pastor's time and energy, both by the congregation and its members and by persons and agencies not associated with the congregation.

The setting of pastoral priorities, often done in anguish and prayer, is not easy for most of us today. But we continue to give top priority to funerals because we think that we can still do things for the grief-stricken which can be done only by us—even for many who have no active church affiliation.

A document from the earliest years of Protestantism states, "It is our task at burial to comfort each other in the Lord." That sums up my basic pastoral approach to the funeral.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

CHEK airs updated World Vision TV special

'I'm Hungry' on Thursday

More than 30 gripping personal stories filmed around the world will bring the reality of hunger to the screen in the updated version of World Vision's national television special "I'm Hungry" on Thursday. The special will be shown on CHEK TV in Victoria from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The program blends an authoritative presentation of the facts of global hunger with personal stories that will help viewers of all ages understand the meaning of hunger.

Host Willaim Newell is an articulate, moving and credible spokesman on behalf of the world's hungry. During his many overseas trips he has had many opportunities to speak with the destitute and needy and to offer them encouragement and hope through programs that meet their needs.

World Vision of Canada is a non-profit Christian humanitarian organization that is dedicated to helping the hurting and hungry world. Since its founding in 1950, World Vision has spent millions of dollars on relief, child care, medical aid, development assistance, evangelism and Christian leadership development throughout the world.

World Vision of Canada has involved hundreds of thousands of people in the fight against hunger. During this national special, some of those people from across the country express their concern for the plight of the world's 800 million who suffer from malnutrition.

The numbers are overwhelming. "I'm Hungry" makes global need personal, and offers tangible ways to understand the need and give practical help.

World Vision, a non-profit, interdenominational Christian humanitarian organization, was founded in 1950 by Dr. Bob Pierce.

It was originally created to serve the needs of children orphaned by the Korean War. Since then, its work has expanded worldwide, to include a wide range of projects in 50 countries. In its 27 years, the organization has contributed millions of dollars in direct international aid.

Included in its humanitarian activities is the feeding, clothing, nurturing, healing and Christian education of more than 125,000 children in 45 countries.

World Vision's relief activities include providing food, medical aid and emergency housing for people suffering as a result of war or natural disasters.

In addition, WV teams worldwide help people learn to produce adequate food, earn an income and create a community life which will result in long-term survival and growth.

The interdenominational agency is also involved in evangelism, Christian leadership development and the support of national churches.

Through this national television special on hunger, World Vision will provide an opportunity for millions across Canada to:

- Help fight raw hunger with emergency food relief.
- Help fight disease and suffering caused by hunger and malnutrition.
- Help fight poverty, illiteracy and the lack of adequate tools that keep communities and nations from learning how to prevent hunger.

Approximately 85 per cent of World Vision's annual budget is spent in direct ministry. Over the past five years, total overhead has averaged only 15 per cent.

Newell

Working closely with local existing organizations and national churches, World Vision directly funds existing or proposed programs in areas proven to be competently organized and meaningful. It sets up its own field programs only in those areas where none exist to meet a given need.

As much as possible, World Vision works through nationals in each country—leaders most familiar with the customs and needs of their people. Its overseas staff includes only 20 North Americans, but some 500 nationals. Another 2,000 nationals are involved with World Vision at the project level. At present there are World Vision field offices in Bangladesh, Brazil, Ethiopia, Hong Kong, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, the Ivory Coast, Kenya, Korea, Haiti, the Philippines, Taiwan and Thailand.

The success of World Vision's efforts is nowhere more evident than in its birthplace. Korean programs once devoted to saving war-ravaged children from disease and death now operate to train healthy, educated children for college and for productive lives. Girls learn dressmaking, embroidery, and other vocational training courses; scholarships are given to gifted students. World Vision sponsors Korean community development projects, a leprosy treatment and research center, nutritional education, farming and other programs.

Other World Vision "success" stories involve long-range development projects which are now self-supporting. Fishing co-operatives hve been developed in the Philippines. Muslim refugees on Mindanao have been relocated and rehabilited. People in India, Ethiopia and Bangladesh have been given "food-for-work", with the materials and assistance needed to dig deep freshwater wells. Many African communities have been helped to improve their families, health, education and economic standards. In Haiti, every person under 20 years of age is being innoculated through the C.A.T. Project (Campaign Against Tuberculosis) while through the Reforestation Project hundreds of thousands of tiny saplings are rejuvenating the mountainsides.

World Vision is funded by voluntary contributions from individuals, organizations and churches in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States. Donations of high protein foods, vitamins and medicines are received from various corporations throughout the country. As a validated voluntary agency, World Vision also works closely with (CIDA) Canadian Development Association.

Witnesses meeting during weekend

Several hundred persons are meeting this weekend for the semi-annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses. Morning and afternoon sessions are being held today and Sunday at the S. J. Willis School on Quadra.

The program is developed around the theme of Keeping Clean and Zealous for Fine Works, featuring talks and interviews on the need to eradicate literal and moral pollution in society, and to build up a positive approach to living. Personal and family involvement in this program will be encouraged; faith in God's purpose to have a cleansed earth is highlighted.

Other highlights include water baptism for newly dedicated servants of God, on today.

On Sunday, April 1 at 1:30 p.m., Richard Grant of Toronto will carry the assembly theme into the public address, entitled A Cleansed Earth — Will You Live To See It?.

Discussing the practical aspects of the assembly program, Overseer George Wilson of Victoria said "Jesus drew illustrations and talked about the principle of cleanness, and gave us an example of a clean, moral and healthy life. Moral cleanness is often put secondary to literal cleanness, but both aspects are most important. When we consider God's purpose to have a clean earth with clean upright standards of control, it behooves us all to think more seriously about the part we play in that purpose."

"A lead must be taken against the moral degradation that is affecting family life and society," Wilson said, "and as Jehovah's Witnesses we urge sincere persons to keep clean and zealous for fine works, and to view the Bible as containing the solution to human problems. Faith, knowledge, prayer and Christian activity is the present and future pattern for peace of mind and happiness."

Adventists missions seek funds

The Seventh-day Adventist Church is studying the medical needs of the church in Argentina and Bolivia with an eye to boosting medical missions in South America, and to this end the local church will be accepting offerings this month.

Adventists operate more than 400 hospitals, clinics, medical launches and airplanes around the world.

Now the church plans to open a hospital in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, reports local SDA communications secretary Kathleen Piper. It will be the first Adventist medical institution in that nation.

Choristers' fresh-up March 31

Saturday, March 31 is shaping up as a day of technical refreshment for church choir singers, choir directors, accompanists and all people interested in choral techniques as a means to spiritual and emotional well-being.

The B.C. Boys Choir, together with the newly-formed B.C. Girls Choir under director Donald Forbes, all of Vancouver, will available to lovers of the choral art at a special workshop in the Memorial Hall auditorium on Vancouver Street at 2 p.m.

Forbes and his singers will bring their own talents and sufficient copies of musical scores to enable those present to participate in a musically helpful and worthwhile experience.

School choirs, secular choirs, concert choirs—all are welcome as well as singers of any age.

The 40 boys Forbes is bringing with him range in age from nine to 22 years, while the 20 girls span the years 14 to 24. Singers are asked to leave $1 at the door to assist the expenses.

Forbes, director of music at St. Andrew's Wesley United Church in Vancouver, will present an evening program with his young singers at 7:30 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral that same day.

Edmonton sister Lenten missioner

Sister Thelma-Anne, SSJD, sister-in-charge of St. John's Priory, Edmonton, will be the Lenten missioner at St. Barnabas' Anglican Church Monday to Thursday.

The theme of the mission is Barriers to Faith, "faith" here including a variety of meanings from intellectual belief to a warm and living relationship with God.

Sister Thelma-Ann's training in philosophy has equipped her well for the role of contemporary apologist for the Christian Faith. Her order, the Sisterhood of St. John the Divine, is the only Anglican order founded in this country.

The planned format of the evening sessions, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., includes addresses in the church, followed by group discussion in the hall.

Various meetings have been scheduled during the daytime, including meetings with the Anglican Church Women and Altar Guild, two Children's Hours from 2 to 3 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. This hour of mixed activities will provide something for the children to look forward to in the School break. An informal pot luck supper is also planned for young adults on Wednesday.

Sister Thelma-Anne

The mission will be followed by a 24-hour beginners' instructed retreat at Queenswood from after supper Friday to Saturday evening. Sisters Marguerite Lalonde and Monnina McKenna of the Sisters of Saint Anne will jointly conduct the retreat.

Everyone is welcome to attend any of these events. Further information available at 595-8242.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, March 25
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on prophetic dreams, hospitals, clubs, institutions. What had been hidden will be revealed. Sagittarius — and another Aries — could figure prominently. You make valuable, new contact. Prospects become bright following minor setback.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Follow through on hunch — learn, teach, regain sense of direction. Aquarius, Cancer individuals figure in scenario. You're able now to win friends, persuade people and to conclude successful business transaction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on advancement, ambition, deciding whether to give or receive orders. Diversify. Display adaptability. Refuse to be painted into corner. Sagittarian plays key role. You get green light to progress — if you have courage of convictions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Evaluate prospects, perceive potential. Break through red tape — find ways of utilizing legal nuances for your own benefit. Individual who inspired you in past may re-appear. Know it, be optimistic, realize there is an "escape hatch."

LEO (July 23-August 22): Bring forth powers of analyses — dig beneath surface, come up with vital answers, conclusions. Financial status of one close to you figures prominently. Member of opposite sex is "serious". If you didn't know it, you could be in for a surprise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on partnership, sales, public relations, harmonizing domestic situation. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Defer to desires of those who mean much to you. You gain now by gathering data, planning ahead. Avoid direct confrontations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study Virgo message — go slow, be sure of rules, regulations. Keep resolutions concerning diet, health and work. See in light of reality, not through haze of wishful thinking. You learn what you need — and ways to obtain it. Setback is followed by "cause for celebration."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Imprint style, express feelings, create and originate. Finish rather than begin, deal with Aries, Libra individuals. Lunar aspect is good — favors following your heart. Affection, love, your individuality — these are accented.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You win! You're vindicated! You complete task, assignment, special project. You receive unique offer, possibly related to teaching and education. You get stamp of approval. Aries person figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take a more independent stance in dealing with neighbors, relatives. You have choice now between "subjugation" and freedom. Display originality, versatility and humor. Welcome new contacts, projects. Leo, Aquarius, Pisces persons figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on security, locating needed material and your income potential. Cancer, Capricorn individuals could play key roles. Follow through on hunch. Get money's worth — and count your change. Someone wants something for nothing — you could be prime target.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain valid hint from Capricorn message. Stress self-reliance, confidence in your own capabilities. Take initiative, lead rather than follow, set your own pace. Make personal appearances — wear bright colors. Be conspicuous by your presence.

IF MARCH 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are romantic and spiritual. You are also psychic and introspective. It is difficult for others to fool you, but you often do a good job of deceiving yourself. You are creative, sensitive, temperamental and you have a tendency to brood and worry. You are better at aiding others than at helping yourself. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, March 26

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You're on brink of getting what you want — know it and keep the faith! Cancer, Capricorn persons figure in scenario. Accent on organization, temporary confinement, dreams, prophecies, hospitals, doubts, suspicions. You will break through to enlightenment — tonight!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on wishes, romance, fantasies, popularity, persuasiveness. Opportunities abound — key is to be selective. Incidentally, it is more important than ever to remember diet, nutrition, health resolutions. Social whirl accelerates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on getting ahead, making known your needs, aspirations and ambitions. Aquarius, Scorpio and Leo play key roles. What you seek is available, but much red tape remains to be untangled. Act accordingly.

CANCER June 21-July 22): You're able to communicate, imprint style, express yourself to fullest. Be ready for special written material, intensified relationship, messages from a distance, response to query concerning educational-professional requirements.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Gentle approach obtains information and "funding". Family, home, change, remodelling, gifts, digging beneath surface to learn truth about money and love. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on ties, partnerships, liaisons, legal manouevres, breaking from situations which causes frustration, exasperation and depression. Pisces person plays prominent role. You learn of hidden meanings, subtle persuasions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on production, getting job done, health, vitality, a definition of duty and dependents. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Older individual makes demands, but teaches you much in process. A pet could require special attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get message across, you sense pulse of public, you reach beyond apparent limitation. What was started, left unfinished, started again — can now be completed. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Member of opposite sex cares — and lets you know about it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Accent on home, guards, quality, structure, security, older person willing to lend benefit of experience. You'll meet someone who shows you new areas, directions and helps you to become more independent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Scorpio message. Creative juices are activated. Imprint style, stress independence, originality. Relative who is restless . . . is also envious. Know it and don't be disturbed by attempted verbal jabs. You do have upper hand!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on money, possessions, property, what you spend and earn. Expand horizons . . . you need not be limited by dictums from the less talented. You are on road to discovery — and vindication. Something you need is handed you on proverbial silver platter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cycle high — judgement, hunch on target. Know it, be direct, confident, take initiative. Break through, shake off lethargy — you're leading the pack. Originality, independence, creativity are featured. Love will replace indifference.

IF MARCH 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are an organizer, capable of making the most of material at hand. You are passionate, a fighter for ideals, willing to see project through to fulfillment. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. July could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring new starts, grand opportunities, the start of "something big". Many past burdens are lifted — you get proverbial second chance. Marital status comes in for considerable attention. An individual comes into your life who challenges and stimulates.

Common Pets Don't Rate A Money-Back Guarantee

By SANDRA BOODMAN

WASHINGTON (WP) — In the Old Dominion, where one's pedigree often smooths the pursuit of happiness, cats and dogs of questionable ancestry have been cruelly snubbed.

In a formal ceremony in Richmond, Virginia Gov. John N. Dalton this week signed into law a bill that gives new protections to Virginians who buy a diseased pedigreed dog or cat from a licensed pet store.

These protections, however, do not apply to buyers of a cheap cat or low-cost dog. Under the law, the corpse of a recently purchased pedigreed dog can be returned to a pet store in exchange for its purchase price. The law is silent on what an owner should do with the corpse of a newly purchased mutt.

"It's not possible to get people through every emotional bump and jolt," said Del. Robison B. James (D-Henrico), defending the bill he sponsored in the General Assembly. The bill generated more mail in the recent session than the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

"These pets are small-cost items so we deliberately excluded them. After all, you're talking about $25 for a mixed-breed animal versus up to $500 for a pedigreed dog or cat," James said.

The cost-accountant approach to pet guarantees has peeved some animal authorities.

"I think it's pretty discriminatory," said Deborah Butler, an investigator with the Arlington Animal Welfare League. "I own an all-American alley cat myself and most people I know don't have pedigreed pets."

Fairfax County animal control director Richard F. Amity says the law is "outrageous."

"What difference does it make what you pay?" said Amity, who himself owns an economy-priced cat. "That's like selling contaminated food and saying it's okay if you get salmonella as long as you knock down the price."

The new law says that the buyer of a pure-bred cat or dog who discovers within 10 days of purchase that the animal is diseased can receive a full refund or replacement from a pet store. Unofficial estimates put the number of dogs and cats in Virginia at 1.6 million, about one-third of which are pedigreed.

"It's not discriminatory," said Jeff Brown, vice-president of the 4,000-member Virginia Federation of Dog Clubs and Breeders, which lobbied for the bill's passage. "It covers 90 per cent of sales by pet dealers because they sell very few non-registered animals."

'30s Film Star Dies

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Ben Lyon, 71, a Hollywood star in the 1930s and morale-raising entertainer in London during the Second World War, has died.

Lyon, entertainment director aboard the Queen Elizabeth II, collapsed and died in his stateroom aboard ship in the Pacific, between Honolulu and Long Beach, Calif.

$14 Million Toy Death Suit

ATLANTA (AP) — The parents of a four-year-old boy who died when a toy missile lodged in his throat have sued Mattel Inc., manufacturer of the toy, for a total of $14 million.

The suits were filed Friday on behalf of John Warren and his wife, Doris.

The Warrens' son, Robert Jeffrey, died last Dec. 31, two days after he "either shot the red missile attachment down his throat or was attempting to load the missile" into a Cylon Raider toy of the company's Battlestar Galactica product line.

Mrs. Warren seeks $3 million in damages for the "wrongful death" of her son and $10 million in aggravated damages.

More Rain in Peoria

Times News Services

Rain and snow swept into Illinois today creating more problems for water-logged Peoria where the swollen Illinois River is swirling through many streets and has already forced 2,000 people to evacuate their homes.

The U.S. National Weather Service said the river level held steady overnight Friday at about 8.6 metres, but would probably rise to about nine metres by later today, breaking a record set 36 years ago.

The flooding has been caused by the melting of the winter's record snowfall in northern Illinois. Rain fell during much of the night in northern Illinois and Indiana — areas whose runoff flows into the Illinois River.

Millions of dollars in damage has occurred to businesses, farms and homes along the Illinois.

The high water level has shut down navigation along the length of the Illinois from south of Joliet to Alton.

A spring snowstorm hit the northern Plains and Great Lakes states today, trailing a band of thunderstorms that produced tornadoes from Missouri to Florida.

Heavy snow and winds gusting up to 50 mph produced near-blizzard conditions, icing roads and making travel difficult from Missouri to Minnesota to Michigan.

Five inches of new snow had fallen at Grant City, Mo., Wausau, Wis., and Marquette, Mich., by early today, the National Weather Service said: Rochester, Minn., got two inches. Columbia, Mo., and Des Moines, Iowa, each got an inch.

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered across the Southeast, moving into the south Atlantic Coast states and breeding some tornadoes along the way.

Five persons, including four workmen, were injured Friday when a tornado touched down near the high school in Zephyrhills, Fla., but no pupils were injured. The tornado hit an area where a school gym is being constructed, bounced over the school and struck a mobile home park a block away.

More Security For Envoys

Times News Services

Additional security measures have been taken in Ottawa to protect the British High Commissioner to Canada, Sir John Ford, following the murder of the British ambassador to the Netherlands, Sir Richard Sykes, by two gunmen in The Hague Thursday.

British embassies in Europe also reviewed security plans today as an international police team hunted for clues in what investigators fear may be the opening shots of a murder campaign against British diplomats.

Police from Britain, the Netherlands and Belgium were investigating the possibility that the two men who killed Sir Richard and his Dutch valet outside his home at The Hague were the same two who hours later shot and killed a Belgian bank official outside his home in Brussels.

Police said they believe the killers mistook the banker, Andre Michaux, 47, for a British envoy who lived across the street.

An anonymous caller with an Irish accent told the Amsterdam newspaper De Telegraaf on Friday that the IRA was responsible for the murder of Sykes, 58, and warned that British ambassadors in Belgium, France or Germany also would be killed.

But another anonymous caller, speaking Dutch, told police and several news organizations a group he identified as the Red Brigade had killed the British envoy on behalf of the IRA. There was no elaboration.

Duncan Dentist Gears to Fight Dental Plan

A Duncan dentist is waging a single-handed fight with the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons and the provincial government over the proposed dental plan announced in the legislature on Thursday.

Dr. Adrian Van Hoek is circulating a petition which he intends to send to Premier Bill Bennett, deploring the move.

"When the government controls a dental plan it attempts to obtain my services by force of law," Van Hoek says. "Such involuntary service is the essence of slavery.

"When the intellectuals of Canada do not understand why our society is crumbling, what hope does the ordinary man have of ever making sense out of today's life?"

In the declaration, Hoek says men have a right "to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness", as well as the right of ownership, production and free trade.

He said dentists have the same rights as other men and it is the responsibility of government to protect those rights.

"No government or person has the right to use force against another, except in defence of said individual liberty," the declaration continues.

Stating that state health care is health care by force of law, obtaining the involuntary servitude of doctors and dentists, Van Hoek's declaration ends:-

"I, the undersigned, protest against a dental plan, regulated, sponsored and paid for in part or in whole by the government of B.C. or any other government"

Van Hoek says he is contacting newspapers and radio stations in order to gain support and signers of his declaration. His address is 2-372 Coronation Avenue, Duncan, B.C., V9L 2T3.

'Power Hungry' NDP Attacked

The first day's debate of the new legislative session was launched Friday with an attack by Pat Jordan (SC — North Okanagan) against "a power-hungry NDP."

In moving acceptance of Thursday's throne speech outlining the Social Credit's programs for the new session, Mrs. Jordan said the NDP are opposed to individual ownership and rights.

"They want power for themselves," she said in her lengthy opening address. "They became intoxicated with power when they were in government. They crave power today."

Again and again she returned to her central theme of the philosophical differences between the two parties.

The throne speech reaffirms the Socreds' belief in the individual while the NDP promote control by the state, she said.

"The former government had an unparalleled opportunity to demonstrate its much touted concern for the people with a large majority (in the house), a socially oriented leader and enormous financial resources," she said.

But in the space of three years they blew it all, the MLA added.

The throne speech, however, places importance on the individual and his freedom to advance through effort.

And the Social Credit government protects the individual from overwhelming power from any sector including big government, Mrs. Jordan said.

Many of her comments attacking the NDP and laudatory compliments to her Socred colleagues were echoed by George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam) who seconded her motion that the throne speech be accepted by the legislature.

The NDP gets its turn as debate continues Monday. Opposition leader Dave Barrett is the lead-off speaker from the opposition benches.

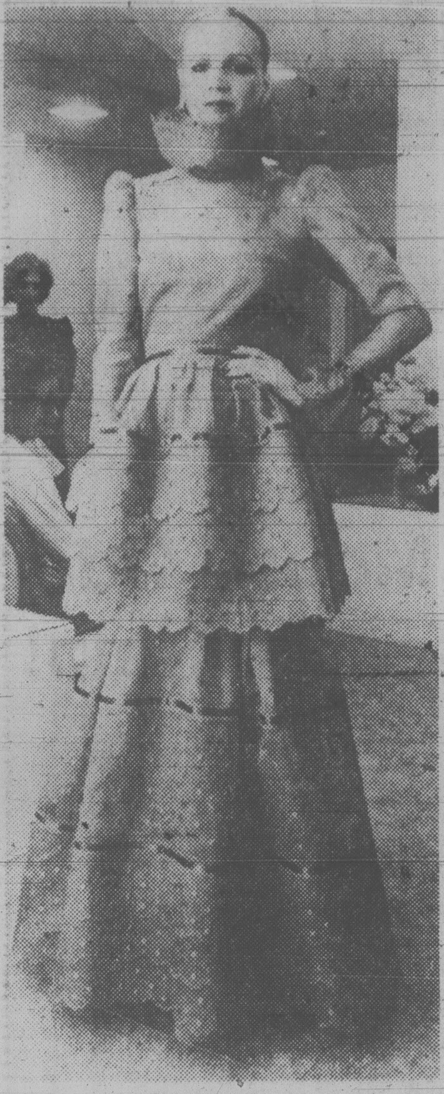
Scaasi Designs: Forget Halloween

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times



NEW YORK — They don't give fashion shows like that very much anymore. Intimate affairs where it's so quiet you can hear the photographers snapping their shutters. Where the applause indicates that some woman has decided the style being modelled fits into her life.

It was Arnold Scaasi's presentation of his spring and summer fashions to women who are mostly his clients and friends, who dropped into his salon on the fourth floor of 681 Fifth Avenue after lunch one day to see what tasty morsels they could add to their warm weather wardrobes.

Helene Fortunoff was a newcomer.

"I'm the landlord," she explained. "I've never seen a Scaasi collection and I want to make sure the workmen are quiet during the show."

Mrs. Fortunoff is a member of the family that runs jewelry and silver stores in Westbury, N.Y., and Paramus, N.J., and is renovating the first three floors of the Fifth Avenue building to accommodate a new bastion in New York. The construction men were silent through most of the show.

Custom-made clothes are a vanishing phenomenon but at Scaasi they still seem vital.

"It's away from Halloween and back to real clothes," one visitor stage-whispered to a friend.

The most spectacular dresses were frothy confections of organdy medallions sewn together. Scaasi likened the shape of each medallion to "the Poiret rose." That was the flower design made famous by the French dressmaker early in this century.

The medallions were in offbeat colors such as fuchsia with blue centers or green with purple. The dresses included a number of strapless styles with ruffles softening the decolletage and introducing the fullness at the hips. In between, the bodices were taut, emphasized by stitched tucks.

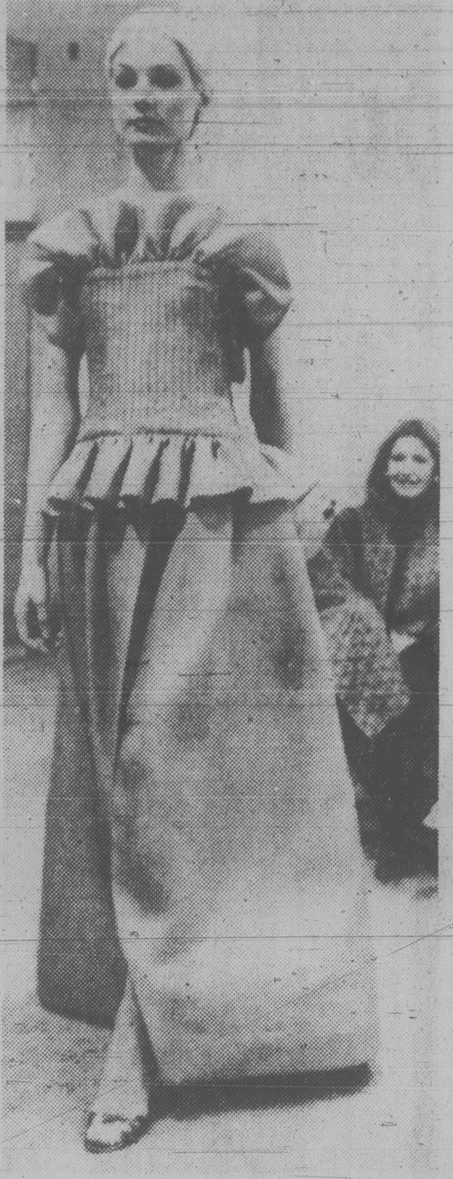
But there were also high-necked styles with a stiff ruff around the throat and scalloped tiers in the skirt, a one-shoulder dress with a side-dipping hemline as well as an organdy jacket over purple satin pants.

Multicolor lace medallions were worked into a 1920s chemise and a beige lace dress had enormous capelike sleeves.

"There's no reason organdy has to always be pink and white," the designer said.

Certainly there was enough diversity to meet the needs of different figures and lend excitement to serious parties in New York this spring and in long Island's Hamptons later on.

Just in case his clients might have a need for something to wear before the sun goes down, Scaasi turned out a number of shapely coats and suits, often in black or in white.



TWO evening looks by Scaasi. At left, neckline ruff and scalloped tiers detail covered-up style. At right, ruffles soften strapless decolletage and hip line, while vertical tucks mark bodice. The big collars, as well as the shaped suits, were reminiscent of Jacques Fath, the couturier whom Scaasi most admired in his student days in Paris in the 1950s. It is the spirit of the couture that designer is interested in perpetuating.

Housewives Tackle Giants

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — It's a hard lesson for corporate food magnates to learn — the hand that rocks the cradle pushes the shopping cart.

But learn it they will if a group of determined housewives has its way.

Women Against Rising Prices started as a coffee-klatsch a month ago, snowballed into a movement and is fast becoming an uprising.

Their weapon: Boycott.

Their troops: Hundreds of women and a few men who are fed up with agonizing over how to finance the family's weekly food bill.

About 2,000 women from across the country have responded to their boycott of selected items.

"The women are calling and writing to ask what they can do to start their own groups," says Rhoda Begley, one of the group's founders. "If they don't know what to boycott we'll send them a list of what we're boycotting here in Brampton."

Since surveys show 80 per cent of food shoppers are women, they're hoping to muster their small army of boycotters to fearlessly give up yogurt, bread, lettuce, meat and other selected items.

"We've listened to the men in government telling us they'll study the situation, file a report, investigate the food industry long enough," Mrs. Begley said.

These formerly mild-mannered housewives are gratified to see that in barely two weeks their effect is being felt.

The group started the campaign Feb. 28 with the idea of issuing a new list of boycotted items each week, but has retained last week's list because at least two grocery chains ran specials on three of the items.

The list includes all meats above $1.75 a pound, imported cheese, all frozen vegetables, head lettuce, sweetened cereals, canned fish, yogurt and all soft drinks.

"The stores are just trying to undercut the boycott by lowering prices while we are boycotting the products. As soon as we stop, the prices will go up again."

"It's too soon to tell if these women are going to hurt us at all," said a spokesman for one large chain.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

The flair of the Irish . . .

You can't beat the Irish for producing lovely wearable clothes fashioned from quality fabrics in subtle colors! . . . Wilson's have just received some suits from Dorene of Ireland . . . and one- and two-piece natural linen dresses hand-loomed into a lacey knit, by Pallas . . . The Dorene suits have the new short jacket . . . one in a heather beige with shadowy check skirt featuring unpressed pleats . . . A similar style in a very soft shade of rose . . . And still another is plain oatmeal . . . These are a silk and wool blend, while in lightweight 100% wool tweed there's a suit with herringbone jacket and plain pleated skirt in a soft moss green . . . and a grey jacketed suit with wide windowpane check skirt . . . These are all beautifully tailored and would see you happily through several seasons for practically any occasion . . . In the Pallas dresses . . . a type of outfit we think every woman should own at least one of . . . There are two 2-pce styles and a 3-pce with sleeveless shell and short-sleeved jacket . . . Skirts are all the same, and very pretty . . . slim at the hips and flaring out towards the bottom, banded with a patterned knit . . . A sleeveless 1-pce dress has a bertha collar and narrow tie belt, and there's a basic short-sleeved dress with a pointed collar . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Special furniture for special people . . .

Standard Furniture boast that they have furniture to fit every taste and budget . . . and it's absolutely true! . . . So don't think we're trying to be snobby when we tell you about some very special furniture we saw there last Monday . . . Specifically, beautiful chesterfield suites in satiny teak and fine quality leather . . . They're not cheap and are definitely meant for people who want something different and really special . . . and which, incidentally, can be found nowhere else in Victoria! . . . We can't begin to tell you how fantastically comfortable these sofas and chairs are . . . The one we sank into . . . a deep brown leather, very contemporarily styled has an interesting feature in that the back and seat cushions can be shifted to give you either a low back and deep seat . . . or high back and lower seat . . . Very ingenious! . . . Another of these suites, whose cushions remain stationary, is a lighter tan color . . . To match there's an ottoman and small rocker . . . all extremely comfortable . . . We can just picture this Norwegian furniture in a library or den or ultra-modern living room! . . . Nowadays you seldom find good clean design in solid teak . . . Standard have solid teak nests of tables . . . round or rectangular coffee tables . . . and a spectacular one-of-a-kind coffee table of solid teak and ceramic tiles in earth tones . . . Real conversation piece! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111

Something new for Easter . . .

With Easter practically around the corner, it occurred to us that some of you might like to have a suit or dress or whatever custom-made . . . to carry out your own ideas, fit you perfectly and give you what we consider better value for your money. Interested? Then lose no time in seeing Ilse of Victoria who's a past mistress in making beautiful clothes . . . Don't delay though, because Ilse is a very busy lady indeed! . . . We were in her Vienna Dirndl Shop this week and were very much taken with the big selection of beautiful Hungarian hand-embroidered and smocked blouses . . . There's multi-color embroidery as well as blue, gold or white embroidery on white dry-dry fabric . . . Very pretty . . . and while they're primarily intended to be worn with dirndl skirts, they look pretty nifty with pants and even straight skirts . . . But it's not all ethnic at this delightful Austrian shop . . . Ilse has as fine a collection of regular type blouses as you could hope to see . . . and we thought her prices were uncharacteristically reasonable! . . . Noticed a lovely cream polyester crepe de chine with a faint floral design embossed in the fabric . . . Little frill around the neck . . . and another similar one with a mandarin collar . . . There are quite a lot of size 20's . . . which is something you don't find too many of . . . Vienna Dirndl Shop & Ilse of Victoria, 1306 Government St., 386-9722.

Witching ways with lighting . . .

Have you ever noticed how much the lighting fixtures . . . the lamps . . . the spots of light that pick out corners or focus on a table or desk tend to set the tone of a room? . . . We always get a charge out of visiting Beston's Lighting Exclusive and mentally planning decors using some of the gorgeous lamps and fixtures that particularly catch our eye . . . This week, for instance, we homed in on a big hanging fixture that looks like thin slabs of cool, green ice suspended from chrome wires . . . This may not be everyone's cup of tea but it's very striking and would be interesting in a very modern dining room . . . or even a large entrance hall! . . . We noticed a lot of interesting and very pretty smaller shag lamps in delicate shades . . . ideal for family or bedrooms . . . very reasonably priced so they'll fit into practically anyone's budget . . . There are gorgeous big ceramic table lamps which look like Peruvian baskets . . . soft earthy colors with deep pleated burlap shades . . . Some Canadian ceramic lamps in the shape of milk jugs have flowers painted on the bases, and beautifully co-ordinated linen shades with just a touch of color . . . One display for traditional rooms features elegant cream ceramic lamps with gold and silver leaf trim, and beautifully pleated shades . . . While another is devoted to ultra-modern lamps for the contemporary room . . . Graceful chrome base arching from a block of travertine . . . Lamps with European frosted globes . . . Do visit soon! . . . Beston's Lighting Exclusive, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-0332.

New and gorgeous at de Goutiere . . .

A couple of new pieces in de Gotiere's window stopped us in our tracks the other day and sent us flying in for a closer look! . . . One of these beauties is a pair of striking, though understated, earrings . . . square hoops in gold with pave diamonds, tagged at $725 . . . The other is a heavy 18K gold pendant with pastel sapphires from South America . . . blue, pink and yellow . . . A free-form design by Mr. de Goutiere himself . . . priced at $1125 . . . Another de G.-designed modern pendant is a beautiful triangular shape in 18K gold with a bark finish . . . $312.50 . . . These are, needless to say, one of a kind, and are very, very beautiful! . . . We noticed a lovely little golden beryl surrounded with six diamonds hanging from a slender gold chain . . . admired a yellow, white and pink 18K gold bracelet in a triple row bamboo pattern . . . It's still March, when the aquamarine holds the birthstone spotlight . . . There are a couple of rings set with these lovely stones along with diamonds . . . and some pretty drop earrings . . . aquamarines with three diamonds . . . De Goutiere's still have quite a few watches and odds and ends of jewellery left over from their "Solar Eclipse" sale . . . going for exactly one-half of their regular price . . . Watches by Omega, Tissot, Girard-Perregaux . . . and a few dainty pearl rings being practically given away! . . . de Goutiere Ltd., 2542 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Start getting those Easter goodies now . . .

Seems to us the Easter Bunny's getting his licks in early at Purdy's this year . . . because when we passed by that way last Monday we saw chocolate bunnies of every size and description . . . not to mention all the lovely colorfully-bedecked baskets filled with all manner of delicious sweeties! . . . On the subject of bunnies (the chocolate variety, that is) . . . there are rabbits on a motorbike or toting an egg, at $1.45 . . . A rooster and a rabbit with basket is $2.95 . . . and for $5.85 you can have a 1-lb. bunny holding a big egg, or a 1½-lb. bunny with a basket on his back for $8.50 . . . All these wrapped in different colored cellophanes . . . "Millie" the lady rabbit weighs 7 lbs. and costs $27.50 . . . "Charles," weighing in at 16 lbs., has a $50 price tag . . . but for $5 you can buy "Hockey Pete," a sturdy bunny on skates wielding a hockey stick . . . all nicely boxed and the ideal Easter gift for a boy of any age! . . . For youngsters there are little boxes of colored jelly beans with chocolate maple leaves . . . or see-through boxes with jelly beans and chocolate plaques . . . Baskets of every size and description . . . And should you have one left over from last Easter, why not just buy all the fixings from Purdy's and make up your own? . . . Before we forget . . . a new marshmallow chocolate bar has been added to Purdy's already big selection . . . It's twice the size of the others, and costs 60¢ . . . Really delicious . . . do try one! . . . Purdy's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1241, Mayfair Shopping Centre, 385-5032 and Empress Hotel, 385-3555.

Trip Down Memory Lane

By MAY E. MacLean

I have just returned from a trip to England and was fortunate to spend a week in London. In some ways it was a nostalgia trip, as I made a point of visiting both the schools I attended when I was young and learning the art of embroidery.

Any reader who happened to attend Barratt's Street Technical College will be interested to know that it was incorporated into the London College of Fashion in 1966 and is now located on John Princes Street, right by Oxford Circus.

Embroidery is still a two-year course on the curriculum, both machine and hand, and I was surprised by the number of young girls taking this course as well as the adult program.

Back in my student days, we learned all the stitches and methods by regimentation, making endless rows of various stitches in sampler fashion. It wasn't until we had been there some time and our art-work and designing perfected, that we were allowed our own interpretation of color and application of stitches. Even then the designs had to follow along traditional lines.

I remember spending many happy hours at the Victoria & Albert museum in South Kensington with it's wealth of Elizabethan needlework and crewel embroidery. This part I rather enjoyed, as I was fascinated with that period in history and everything relating to it.

KNIT & CHAT

Today the school allows much more freedom of design from the beginning and encourages the student to experiment with freedom of stitches and techniques. One could understand why some of the students seemed so absorbed in their work.

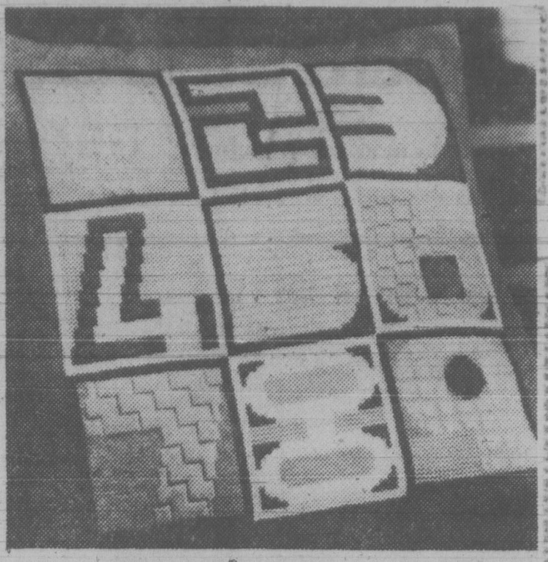
For instance, one girl had taken the U.N. symbol for the Year of the Child, using Italian cutwork for part of the design with the clever use of fine bobbin lace in the open spaces and tiny seed pearls as highlights.

There were so many pieces of embroidery which I would like to describe and I will from time to time. I will also be showing slides of these designs on my TV program in the near future. Next week I'll be telling you of my visit to the Royal School of Needlework.

If you would like tc learn the other stitches used in needlepoint, here is your chance. This cunningly designed cushion is — yes you're right — all numerals. Learn your stitches while making a cushion cover.

Among many stitches illustrated are Gobelin, Hungarian, Rhodes, Scottish and Jacquared as well as Byzantine and many more. Complete directions, illustrations and charts are given on the Leaflet.

To order Leaflet No. 7955, send 75 cents PLUS a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, c/o 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que., H9G 1M6



Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All back numbers of my series are available price 75 cents each; the catalogue of gift ideas is 25 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope, or an extra 25 cents.

GEMWISE

JEWELRY FASHIONS, FACTS, FICTION

EASTER EGGS AND GEMSTONES

The Easter season brings to my mind myriads of colors: the fresh green of new grass, the subtle hues of early blossoms and the return of the warm gold of sunshine. Colored gemstone and gold jewelry fit in well with the sights of Eastertime.

There are pastel gemstones which remind me of Easter eggs and the pale palette of spring fabric colors. Turquoise is the first gemstone I envision. Perhaps because its ideal color is what some people refer to as "robin's egg blue." The brighter greens of jade, the fresh green of malachite, and the clear greens of emerald and peridot remind me of spring greenery. And the lovely lavender of pale amethyst or kunzite or the rare lavender jade reminds me of delicately spun fabric.

When these stones are accented by a delicate gold mounting, sunshine comes to mind or even the delicate warm color of straw baskets and bonnets.

Another gemstone fits in very well with the Easter celebration due to the legend that's been built around it. This is bloodstone, a dark green stone mottled with red. It has been said that the stone was pure green at one time; however one of these stones was reportedly sitting at the base of the cross during Christ's crucifixion where blood dripped onto it. As a reminder of the cruel deed, all such stones have since been found mottled with a deep red color.

For an Easter of Springtime gift, think of colored gemstone jewelry. It's the perfect gift for such a happy season of rejoicing.

Too Much Mousy Odor So Mom Hollers Help!

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: You mentioned that mice have a mousy odor. I can tell you that's no joke around this house! My son's mice have too much mousy odor. The whole house is slowly beginning to succumb. Is there some kind of deodorizing spray that will stop that odor? My son won't give up his mice and I won't, or don't want to, give up my home. Help!

DEAR A.H.: Mousy odor is related to the number of mice, the frequency (or, more likely, the infrequency) with which they are cleaned, the ventilation, if any, in the room in which they are kept, and other lesser factors including the type of bedding, food, space available and room temperature. Minimizing musty mouse odor is best accomplished by maintaining strict sanitation. Room-type deodorizers, solid or the old wick type, are safe and certainly more effective in the long term than sprays.

Minimizing mouse population explosions is a must since runaway rodent reproduction results in proportional prodigious odor problems.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What is some kind of a disease called polar madness? — D.Y.

DEAR D.Y.: Polar madness is a form of rabies affecting, primarily, polar foxes. It can sometims occur in sled dogs.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I bought a sail-fin molly because it looked so beautiful with that big spread dorsal fin. I went to particular pains to set up proper lighting in my tank so I could enjoy its beauty. Well, so far no luck. It never spreads out that big fin, so, of course, it isn't the beauty I was hoping for. Was I expecting too much? Do they only display that fin during breeding or something like that?

I haven't the room for another one, but is there anything I can do to get this one looking good again? — C.M.

DEAR C.M.: You can expect a healthy, happy, sail-fin molly to keep that dorsal fin spread most of the time. They are not a particularly easy fish to keep and require, among other things, plenty of room, some peace and quiet, hard, alkaline, preferably brackish, water and in the diet, along with meat foods, they require vegetable matter with a preference for floating algae. When the above general requirements are not met or when the fish is stressed by causes such as being transferred to a new tank, the sail-fin molly (or any other fish) will be more susceptible to specific disease problems.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Because we are on a fixed retirement income, money is short. We love or two cats dearly, but their medical bills have to be kept down. 'Way down. How can we best do this?

Their doctor approves of their food and minimum booster vaccination schedule. What else, please? — N.H.

★ ★ ★

DEAR N.H.: To keep cat care costs down: keep your cats inside to minimize hospital bills related to parasitisms, poisonings, car accidents, bites and miscellaneous other cat-tastrophies. Groom your cats every day or two to minimize external parasites and skin problems and internal hairballs. Know you cats' "normals;" i.e., their usual paterns in relation to eating and eliminating, playing and sleeping, so that when these patterns change subtly or suddenly, you will be aware of it early and can take prompt action yourself or seek expert help if necessary, before problems become big, serious and expensive.

Common ₵ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

When you visit a warehouse grocery for the first time, take along a list of prices stamped on foods already in your cupboards. That way you'll know which items really are priced lower — not all items are. If the warehouse is inconveniently located, consider buying a month's supply of the best bargains, such as paper products, canned goods, dog food.

★ ★ ★

If you can't afford a humidifier to add moisture to your dry furnace heat and make you and your houseplants more comfortable, set out trays, pans, buckets of water. Even wet bath towels will add moisture. Or get out the vaporizer you used when the kids had a cold. (The vaporizer works, too, when air-conditioned air has little humidity.)

★ ★ ★

Beginner cooks, did your mother ever tell you that over-mixing a batter toughens pancakes? That cooking meats at high temperatures or salting while cooking dries and toughens meats? That fresh eggs are the most difficult to peel when hard-boiled? That a little cooking oil put into boiling spaghetti water keeps strands from sticking? That you should never wash berries before storing them in the refrigerator?

★ ★ ★

Expected higher oil prices will affect the cost of more than fuelling your car or your oil-burning furnace. In a short time, they will boost the prices of everything plastic in your house. So replace whatever plastic housewares you need to now while prices are relatively stable.

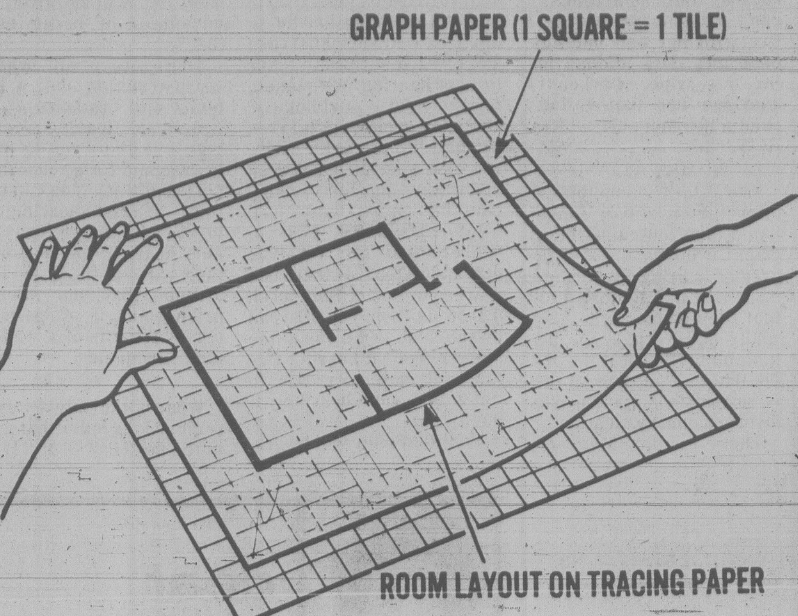
Ceiling Messy? Just Tile over It

By A. J. HAND



NARROW EDGE tiles spoil the look of a tiled ceiling, and the best way to avoid it is to draw a scale plan of the ceiling on tracing paper, then lay it over graph paper to represent the squares. By shuffling the plan around, the best positions for the tiles can be found.

Problem ceilings come in two types. One type features a crack or two that just won't take a permanent repair. You rake it clean, plaster it, sand it smooth and paint it. A few months later the crack is back. The other problem ceiling won't hold paint. Blisters and flaking re-appear, repair after repair.

The best solution to both these problems is a new ceiling. And the easiest way to get a new ceiling is with ceiling tiles applied with adhesive.

Adhesive lets you apply the tiles directly to your old ceiling as long as it is in relatively decent shape. You can't expect the adhesive to hold the tiles in place if paint is peeling off the ceiling in huge sheets. But adhesive will do the job if the paint is merely flaking or blistering in scattered areas.

There's no real trick to applying ceiling tiles with adhesive. Make sure you get the right kind of tiles. Some are designed only for installation with special systems such as suspended grids. Others have coated or treated backs that the adhesive doesn't stick to. When you buy your tiles, pick up enough ceiling tile adhesive to do the job. A gallon will put up about 60 square feet of tile.

The most critical part of the job is planning the layout. In almost all cases, the border tiles — those that run along the walls — will have to be cut to fit. The object of a good layout is to make these border tiles at least a half tile wide.

There are several different layout techniques, but this one works with all shapes and sizes of tiles and rooms: Get some graph paper divided into half-inch squares, or draw up your own. Each of these squares will represent a single foot-square tile.

On a sheet of tracing paper, draw the layout of the ceiling you plan to tile. Make the drawing to the same scale as the graph paper (one-half - inch equals a foot).

Now you can place the layout of the room over the graph paper and shift it around until the border tiles on opposite walls are the same width, and at least a half tile wide. Skinny border tiles look bad. Once you arrive at the right arrangement, tape the two sheets together and use them as a map to guide placement of the tiles.

Note: Be sure this map represents the ceiling of your room, not the floor. It may help you visualize things better if you hold the map overhead periodically as you draw it. You can even tape it to the ceiling for easy reading once it's done.

Applying the tiles. Some people start at a corner, but I find it easier to begin near the centre of the room, then finish off by cutting the border tiles to fit. To do this, snap a chalk line across the ceiling, representing a seam between two rows of tiles near the centre of the room. Then snap another line perpendicular to the first, representing another seam.

Apply adhesive to your tiles as instructed on the adhesive label. Place a row of tiles along one chalk line, then the other, being careful to interlock the tongue and groove edges of the tiles. These two rows will now guide the placement of all the other tiles. Do the main body of the ceiling first, then cut and fit the border tiles.

You can cut the tiles with a fine toothed saw, or score them deeply across the face with a sharp knife and break. The tiles needn't fit snugly across the wall. A slight gap makes for easier placement. When you are finished tiling you cover the gap with molding.

Fashions Cleaner

PARIS (CP) — The clean-lined fashion silhouettes for spring demand minimal accessories, designers at Givenchy report. They say that the shaped fashions require a clearly marked waist with soft leather or suede sashes and tiny tailored belts to pull suit jackets into proportions.

How to telephone for help when you can't make it to a telephone.

Simply push the button on the Protectalert transmitter, carried in the pocket or around the neck. From a distance of up to 200 ft. it will trigger an automatic telephone dialer which will call up to ten pre-recorded requests for help. If a number is engaged, or unanswered, the dialer will skip to the next one. Think of Protectalert for the elderly. For people with heart problems, diabetes, epilepsy and speech problems. For the deaf, the blind and paraplegics. In an emergency it can get a message to a doctor, hospital, family or friends.

Call us for a demonstration. We'll also show you a dual channel model that accepts signals from fire detectors and burglar alarms. As well as from someone you love who is in distress.

Maybe Hearing isn't Sound

I can hear all right, but my daughter keeps nagging me that I don't. I can hear sounds, but sometimes I can't make out her words. I live with her and her husband and she's making my life miserable. How can I convince her that I don't need a hearing aid? — Mrs. R. W.

DEAR MRS. W.:

I've heard your tale so often that it almost sounds like a tape recording. Many people who have some degree of hearing impairment insist that it is not their fault that they cannot hear; they really believe it is the bad mumbling speech of the people that surround them that is responsible for the poor levels of communication.

There is something very special that you can do to benefit yourself and, once and for all, determine if your hearing is, indeed up to par. An examination by an otologist (ear specialist) can quickly determine your level of hearing. With tuning forks and audiometric study, all guesswork is taken out of your problem. There are also specialized speech discriminating tests which can determine how well words ordinarily used in conversation are received and understood. If there is a marked deficiency in speech discrimination, you then can be retested, using one of the many excellent hearing aids that are now available to "pick up" your hearing capacity.

Your daughter will be gratified to know that you are doing something about the problem that seems to exist. You, too, will be given the advantage of better hearing.

There are many hearing aid distributing centres, hospitals and branches of the American Hearing Society that will allow you to try a hearing aid for a reasonable period of time. You can then judge if that hearing aid gives you better, serviceable hearing. Do not, however, be so fixed in your attitude that you will deprive yourself of the wonderful benefits of a well-fitted hearing aid.

What is the safest way to remove long hairs that grow in the nostrils? — Mr. H. D.

Dear Mr. D.:

These unsightly hairs should be cut, preferably by someone else, and only after the area has been cleaned with soap and water or alcohol.

The hairs should not be cut too close. Be sure that the scissors are clean and do not penetrate the skin or the mucous lining of the nose. These are specially made blunt-end scissors for this purpose that are particularly safe.

Pulling out hairs can be dangerous. Germs which normally lie on the surface of the skin or mucous membrane, especially the staphylococcus, can enter the hair follicle and introduce an infection.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I teach a Bible class for adults and was told that you had written a set of "Ten Commandments for Husbands" and also one for wives. Will you please run them again?

M.B.

DEAR M.B.: Although I've published these "Commandments" three times, and have granted literally hundreds of reprint permissions for church publications (always without charge), here they are again:

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBANDS

1) Thou shalt put thy wife before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter and thy son, for she is thy lifelong companion.

2) Abuse not thy body either with excessive food, tobacco or drink, that thy days may be many and healthful in the presence of thy loved ones.

3) Permit neither thy business nor thy hobby to make of thee a stranger to thy children, for the precious gift a man giveth his family is his time.

4) Forget not the virtue of cleanliness.

5) Make not thy wife a beggar, but share willingly with her thy worldly goods.

6) Forget not to say, "I love you." For even though thy love be constant, thy wife doth yearn to hear the words.

7) Remember that the approval of thy wife is worth more than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers. Cleave unto her and forsake all others.

8) Keep thy home in good repair, for out of it come the joys of thy old age.

9) Forgive with grace. For who among us doth not need to be forgiven?

10) Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

P.S. Next Saturday, Ten Commandments for Wives.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this guy for five months. Both of my parents liked him a lot until he grew a beard. When he showed up at my house with his new beard, my parents were actually rude to him.

They said he looked like a bum or someone who was trying to overthrow the government. Abby, I think his beard looks great and told him so. It's not shaggy or neglected-looking — it's carefully cropped and really looks neat.

I was so embarrassed when my folks put this guy down, I didn't now what to say or do.

Abby, how do you feel about beards?

PAM

DEAR PAM: If they're neat and well-cared for, I think they're great. Some of the most important men in history had beards: Moses, Abraham Lincoln and Sigmund Freud, to name a few. And don't forget the Smith Brothers, who coughed up a fortune.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SAD IN ROCKVILLE": You can't make anyone like you but you can make yourself more likable.

Life in Dutch Village Rolling Right Along

ARNHEM, Holland (Reuter) — The village has everything you would expect in a modern small community: a post office, supermarket, beauty parlor, restaurant, library and even a travel agency.

Only wheelchairs cruising the streets instead of cars tell the outsider that this place is unique. It is believed the only self-contained community in the world inhabited exclusively by the physically handicapped.

The present population is 400 adults of all ages, all suffering from incurable diseases such as multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, rheumatoid arthritis and polio.

Het Dorp, which means The Village, is an experiment in the care of the severely handicapped which has provoked controversy among government officials and medical experts.

The Dutch government, which officially supports this village set on a wooded plateau overlooking the town of Arnhem, says it has no plans to build another such community.

"The place for handicapped people is with the rest of society," an official in the culture ministry says.

"Het Dorp has not been the success we would have liked."

Yet Dr. Arie Klapwijk, the village founder, disagrees:

"Holland is a lot richer for Het Dorp. The alternative would be to send these people to nursing homes and hospitals where they would be far worse off," he said in an interview.

Nine years after its completion, this micro-society's day-to-day affairs are run by a 15-member council elected from among the inhabitants.

When Canadians Had 700 Slaves

By CANADIAN PRESS

Whether as slaves or free men, blacks have been part of Canada's story for 374 years. They have provided the country's history with a legacy that is rich, albeit little known.

Slavery in Canada had its origin in New France — now Quebec — when a lone captive child from Madagascar was given to the infamous brigand David Kirke. By the time of his death the captive, Olivier de Jeune, was free and Christian.

The first known black Canadian was a Portuguese fisherman and former slave who landed at what is now Annapolis Royal, N.S., in 1605.

During the American Revolution, Loyalists fled the United States by coming to Upper and Lower Canada and, as an added inducement, were allowed to bring their slaves with them.

A black slave was the first person officially executed in Upper Canada (Ontario) for stealing some rum and furs. He was hanged in 1792.

Not long after the Loyalists and their slaves arrived in the country, British parliamentarians began the fight against slavery.

One of the most prominent abolitionists was John Graves Simcoe, who spoke out strongly against slavery in the House of Commons. After he became lieutenant-governor he said that he would not support any law that "discriminated by any dishonest policy between the natives of Africa, America and Europe."

In 1793, several indignant witnesses watched as Chloe Cooley, a black slave, was bound, put in a boat and transported across the Niagara River to be sold to an American. Her plight was highly publicized and showed the black's total lack of legal protection.

Her master could not be charged because British law regarded slaves as chattel, having no more rights than any farm animal.

In 1793, the Anti-Slavery Act was passed. It prevented the further introduction of slaves into Canada and provided gradual abolition, stipulating that all slaves become free men when they reached the age of 25.

Despite its shortcomings, the act was the first of its kind in the British Empire and can be considered Ontario's first human rights statute.

By then, slavery was on the decline. It never really was a profitable venture in Canada because of the short agricultural season and the cost of supporting slaves through long, hard and unproductive winters.

Blacks, both slave and freeman, fought with distinction in the War of 1812 and the Rebellion of 1837.

The blacks efforts in 1812 were rewarded with a government grant of Crown lands in Simcoe County. The community had disappeared by the early 1900s as blacks moved into other areas in Simcoe and Grey counties — especially Barrie, Collingwood and Owen Sound.

It is still remembered, however, as the earliest all-black settlement in Canada and the only one ever encouraged and subsidized by the government.

After the War of 1812, the word spread that Canada was a haven for escaped slaves and that their rights were protected by British law.

Attorney-General John B. Robinson declared that the civil rights of blacks would be honored and protected here, encouraging many American slaves to make the long, hard journey north to freedom.

Blacks began to settle along the frontier facing Detroit and along the Niagara Peninsula. Eventually some strayed into the larger centres of Toronto, London, Hamilton and St. Catharines.

In 1850, the United States enacted a law permitting slave-owners and their agents to pursue escaped blacks into the northern states and return them to slavery.

These actions by white Americans intensified the activities of the famous Underground Railroad, which had been helping slaves to escape the southern states since the 1820s.

Using a maze of well concealed land and water routes, blacks and whites, Quakers, Methodists, Presbyterians, city people and farmers helped slaves to escape into Canada. The refugee population increased by as much as 50,000 between 1800 and 1860.

During the period of Canadian slavery, there were only about 700 slaves in all, and it is unlikely that any were left when the British Imperial Act of 1833 abolished slavery throughout the empire. That was 33 years before Abraham Lincoln's Emancipati'n Proclamation freed slaves in the United States.

Tellers Taught Holdup Drill

EDMONTON (CP) — A cryptic note is shoved across the counter and an armed man demands money. It's what bank tellers fear most.

A new school helps tellers prepare to deal with robbers as well as the more mundane parts of the job.

Pat Lowe, who recently opened the tellers school in Edmonton, advises:

"Do exactly what they (robbers) say. Give them whatever they want. Your life is more important than money."

Ms. Lowe, who was robbed while working as a teller in a Winnipeg bank, says some girls faint when it happens. But don't try to fake it, she says, because the robber won't be fooled.

To help prospective tellers prepare for a robbery, city police spend a morning with each class at the National Tellers Training Institute.

In addition to telling them how to handle themselves during a robbery, police pass on tips on how to spot counterfeit money, how to spot some of the classic frauds and how to identify a crook.

The school offers Grade 11 graduates a month-long course to prepare them to work at a bank, credit union or trust company. The firm opened its first tellers school at Vancouver in September, 1977, and has trained about 575 women and 25 men.

Students are taught all basic transactions in both the classroom and in a simulated bank where students double as tellers and customers.

In addition to teller functions, instruction covers topics such as dress, deportment and what to expect in a job interview.

Good organizational skills, accuracy, legibility, communication skills, and the ability to get along with many different people are the marks of a good bank employee.

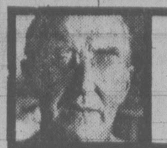
Why Not Grow Jasmine Downwards?



GARDENING

jack beastall

Although we refer to Jasmines as climbing plants, and find them listed as such in catalogues, none that we can grow here is a climber in the true sense of the word.

Most of those which succeed outdoors in our climate, and that amounts to a pitiful few of a large genus, have no inclination to climb or twine, so we have to train them to supports of one kind or another.

Without support they grow into a tangle of branches from which it is a major job to sort out the old wood that has to be removed once in a while.

Jasmines love to grow along wires attached to a wall or fence. When the main canes are tied to the wires the younger growths will gracefully arch outwards displaying the flowers to full advantage and making such thinning as may be necessary an easy operation.

Young plants set out this spring or last fall can be correctly trained from the start; this saves the gardener hours of time at a later date.

Plants that have been neglected and have become a tangle of old and new canes, will have to be removed from their supports and laid on the ground while the growths are sorted out. The oldest parts are cut away and such new wood as can be saved is tied back to the supports.

Jasminum nudiflorum, naked flowering or flowering on leafless branches, is the common jasmine of our gardens which shows its flowers any time from early December into March.

If this had been the only plant found by Robert Fortune in China, we would owe him a debt of gratitude, but his trip in 1844 gave us many flowering shrubs which are well known in local gardens.

In the case of Jasminum nudiflorum, our gratitude to Robert Fortune is for a valuable shrub that will grow in town gardens or suburban acreages, in just about any soil, enduring some degree of abuse and neglect, yet still brighten the darkest days of winter whether it faces north, south, east or west. The only fault one could list is the lack of a powerful fragrance which adds to the charm of so many jasmines.

The others are almost unknown to the average home gardener and therefore rarely seen. Jasminum officinale, the jasmine of the old herbals, deserves almost as much praise as nudiflorum.

Possibly it is overlooked because the clusters of sweet scented white flowers are borne from June to early autumn when the garden is a blaze of color. Planted against a wall, it has endured some low temperatures in and around Victoria.

There is pink summer flowering jasmine named after its introducers, the Bee's Nursery in England, Jasminum Beesianum. It is another Chinese species, much less vigorous than the white officinalis, but a beautiful shrub to train to the supports of a carport or back veranda, with a little protection from the northeast winds in winter.

When planting a new garden, or changing the present garden, it is worth remembering that any plants for which we have to provide support to hold them up in the air, will, when left to their devices, make a fountain-like growth of arching branches which can be tipped with pruners to maintain this shape of plant, or the branches left unpruned to form a ground cover.

We spend many hours of our time making plants grow upwards which normally prefer to grow downwards, and what better combination struggling down a bank or a natural rock face than the three jasmines mentioned above, interlaced to protect one another, pink and white in summer, yellow in winter.

It is an effect worth trying if a good depth of soil can be found for the roots, and large enough to provide shelter for the root area of the jasmines.

Something entirely different is Jasminum parkeri, a comparative youngster in this genus, discovered in North-west India in 1919 and introduced four years later.

The nature of most jasmines is to throw their slender arms far and wide, but this pygmy grows sedately with a neat huddle of interlaced stems, forming a hummock of deep green on which the short-stemmed yellow flowers rest, never more than three inches in height.

This jasmine is one of the precious gems we use in our rock gardens, never intrusive nor invasive. It has occasionally been injured slightly by a low temperature when lacking a covering of snow for protection, but the damage has been confined to the softer tips and the plants invariably break freely from older wood the following spring and soon return to their yellow-splattered cushions.

If Jasminum polyanthum could be grown outdoors in this climate, all other jasmines would receive low ratings, so maybe it is fortunate that it survives only in a frost-free greenhouse. The flowers are white inside, soft pink outside, carried in dense panicles in spring, with a perfume that makes you believe it is the most fragrant shrub you have known.

Another is Jasminum primulinum, much like nudiflorum in habit and general habit but more spectacular in flower because the golden blossoms are twice as large, it is a spring flowering evergreen shrub to 10 feet or so which Bailey, our authority on plants cultivated on this continent, lists under its original name of J. mesnyi.

It is said to be hardier than polyenthum but cannot, as far as I know, be considered safe outdoors over winter here. I mention it because a few Californian plants were in circulation here three or four years ago and someone may be growing it in a greenhouse or a warm corner of a really sheltered garden.

Those are about all of the twenty-four cultivated species of jasmines we are likely to see in this area.

The most common is the Jasminum nudiflorum. Pruning consists of cutting back hard the shoots that have flowered, which means removing most of each shoot. It should be done as the last blossoms fade. If you have a plant that has been left untouched for several years, it would be a good idea to tackle it this weekend.

The summer flowering species, officinalis the white, and beesianum, pink, can be thinned out in late summer after flowering is over if the shrubs are getting congested — or the job can be added to the late winter pruning list.

Work for Week

Gardens having sloping ground with sandy soil could be planted with gladioli corms at end of month. Add humus to hold moisture during summer growth.

Plant out sweet peas started in pots. Pinch out tip of single stem to start the branching low on each plant. These also need humus in the soil for constant moisture retention in summer.

Sow seed of dwarf dahlias in greenhouse or porch. Prick out into separate containers to give space for tuber to develop. These are fine plants for tub growing on balcony, patio or sundeck. Sow also inside, the seeds of annual asters for later transplanting out.

Buy and plant herbaceous perennials for summer and fall colour.

If soil suitable at end of month, plant a half dozen potato pieces just for a chance to get a dish or two of fresh flavored ones in late June.

If peach blooms opening and frost expected, protect with old cotton curtain or similar material.

Prick out earlier sown tomatoes into small pots. No fertilizer.

Sow sweet pepper, eggplant and okra at end of month indoors.

Less Bubbly Consumed

EPERNAY, France (Reuter) — Canadians drank less French champagne last year than they did in 1977, the Champagne Producers Association said Monday. Last year's consumption was about 1.1 million bottles, compared with 1.4 million bottles in 1977. Meanwhile consumption in the United States nearly doubled, with more than 7.1 million bottles drunk in 1978, compared with 4.8 million bottles in 1977.

★

'Marx Bros.' Coming

Irreverence and wild wit is easily pardoned by classical audiences in the case of the Canadian Brass, for they are brilliant musicians.

The fun-loving quintet, billed as the Marx Brothers of classical brass, will bring their zany stage style and instrumental virtuosity to the Royal Theatre for one concert, Saturday, March 31.

With a repertoire that ranges from renaissance to ragtime, tuba player Charles Daellenbach is quick to emphasize that music, not the antics, is the message.

"We would like to be known for our Bach, not our humor," he says.

The Canadian Brass is building an excellent international reputation, successfully touring Russia and China in 1977 and enthusing audiences more recently in New York and major European centres.

This exposure, along with three solid selling albums, has led to a lucrative recording contract with RCA that trumpeter Ronald Romm says will launch them into the international concert circuit.

Tickets are on sale at McPherson box-office and Hillside Mall ticket centre, with discounts offered senior citizens and students.

Arndt Returns

Denis Arndt, who so vividly and with feeling portrayed the father/husband in The Belfry Theatre's unforgettable production of Joe Egg recently, returns to The Belfry stage next week. He will be playing a dozen different characters in Spokesong, but his major role is as Trick Cyclist, who emcees the show with vaudeville patter and comic chorus.

Spokesong is a lyrical play combining a passionate and sentimental history of the bicycle with an equally passionate tandem history of the troubles in Belfast. Author Stewart Parker has created a poignant plea for peace in Northern Ireland through the art of pedal-bike appreciation.

The story told by Spokesong is of a second generation shopkeeper whose quaint bicycle shop is an island in a sea of bombing debris.

An old-fashioned love story is the centrepiece of the play in which Frank, the shopkeeper meets Daisy Bell, a down-to-earth school teacher.

There is a sub-plot concerning Frank's grandfather and his sweetheart.

Spokesong, directed by Don Shipley, with Joan Beckow as music director and Chris Donison at the piano, opens Thursday and will run through April 14 with the exception of Mondays. There will be Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

Tickets are now available at The Belfry, McPherson box-office, Hillside Mall ticket centre and University ticket centre.

Chipman Soloist With Symphony

Symphony patrons with a taste for easy listening will welcome the return of baritone singer Peter Chipman when he appears as guest soloist with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra in its final pop concert of the season. There will be two performances at University Centre auditorium, Sunday and Monday at 8 p.m.

Former Victorian Glen Fast, associate conductor of the Vancouver Symphony, will guest conduct the concerts.

Chipman, one-time city stockbroker who chose to invest his future in entertainment, is achieving national recognition with his smooth, mellifluous renditions of popular ballads and original material. His singing career grew from major roles in west coast stagings of Broadway musicals and part-time dining lounge engagements.

Two years ago, fully committed to music, he teamed with Victoria town planner Tom Loney, who wrote many of the tunes on Chipman's first album. These included Everybody's Writing Songs, a single release which is enjoying considerable radio airplay across the country.

Possessor of a warm melodic style, carefully tailored to middle-of-the-road audiences, Peter is certainly a blue-chip entertainer on the Canadian nightclub scene. With another album in the offing and a chance to host a summer television series, he is one to watch in the future.

Serious Ballet it Ain't When Trocks Hit Boards

They're just a little concerned that you might take their name — Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo — seriously.

For serious is one thing you must never be about the Trocks.

Oh, you'll see some good dancing if you take in their one-night performance at 8 p.m. at the Royal Theatre on March 30 when they pay their first-ever visit to Victoria. But you'll also see a lot of quite crazy things as well.

For the Trockaderos, though not female impersonators, are an all-male company presenting outrageous and utterly delightful entertainment that combines an excellent knowledge of traditional ballet with a sense of comedy and sometimes even a touch of slapstick.

In just three years Peter Anastos, the artistic director of Les Ballets Trockaderos, has lead his company of 160-pound ballerinas (or ballerinos as they call themselves) in tutus, pink tights and toe shoes to the top of the North Amercian dance world, playing to packed houses throughout the United States and Canada.

His secret is a clever blending of spoof with technique, satirizing the least satirized of all the major arts, the dance.

"But you must understand you are going to see a spoof," warns promoter Julia Switzer of Vancouver. "You're going to see a very good spoof. But it is a spoof.

"Sometimes when people don't read about the Trocks first, they come along to the show expecting to see serious ballet," Julia explains. "But that doesn't matter because even the most ardent of ballet nuts laugh so much that they end enjoying it.

"We've never had to give a refund yet."

MYSTERY, dark secrets, and subtle malevolence are threads in the brooding web that comprises the plot of the psychological thriller The Late Edwina Black, opening Thursday at Langham Court Theatre. Fear grips Ellen (Ginny Carter) in this scene as the Inspector (Jack Wilkinson) presses her to tell him what she knows about the death of Edwina Black. Directed by Jutta Woodland, the Victoria Theatre Guild production also features Brian Lenton and Gina Wilkinson. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

China Children's Art

A preview by means of studying samplings in an attractive catalogue of the show (beautifully printed in Victoria, incidentally, by Morris Printing Company), makes the forthcoming Children's Art Exhibition from Luda Municipality, Liaoning Province, People's Republic of China, appear to be something no one would want to miss.

It opens Monday in the mezzanine gallery at McPherson Playhouse, where it will remain on view through April 18. The show is being presented by Pearson College Department of Oriental Studies and the Chinese-Canadian Friendship Association of Victoria.

Judging from catalogue reproductions by children ranging in age from four years to 17, these youthful artists have exceptional powers of observation and both an intuitive and trained sense of composition and selection. The illustrations are in black and white, but if the color sense is as acute and imaginative, the actual display should prove a joy.

The exhibition will showcase art work from the city of Dalien, and feature individual and group paintings, Chinese brush painting, crayon, watercolor and woodcuts.

A collective letter purported to be from the children themselves constitutes a preface to the catalogue. It radiates happiness, goodwill toward the children of Canada, the ideal state of childhood in the Republic of China, and the enrichment their normal education confers:

"Besides the main courses in school, we also have the opportunity to take part in various other cultural activities, sports and scientific experiments. Artistic creation is one of them, and one of the most popular at that ... Our children art groups now totalling over 200 in the municipality, have created tens of thousands of pictures ... These works have often been exhibited in schools and children's palaces for the purpose of learning mutually and sharing experience," the letter proclaims.

Christine Richards is a Victoria artist who has recently been accepted into the Federation of Canadian Artists. She began her art studies in England and later, after immigrating with her husband and family to Canada, did life drawing at the University of Alberta with Robert Carmichael. She has also studied oil painting and acrylics at Cariboo College but is now a resident of Victoria.

Thursday through Saturday she will have a display of her work at Drapery World Interiors, 2517 Estevan Avenue. There will be a preview Wednesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Hours Thursday through Saturday are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

In October there will be a major exhibition of Ms. Richards' paintings in Vancouver at the British Columbia Arts Council Gallery.

Recent drawings and watercolors of the Victoria area — specifically Chinatown and Fisherman's Wharf — will be the content of a one-day studio show by Vicky Husband on Tuesday. The showing will take place in the Hook Sin Tong Society building, 666 Herald Street, in Victoria's Chinatown.

Viewing hours will be from 12 noon to 7 p.m.

Choral Concert

A joint concert by the University of California (Los Angeles) Men's Glee Club and the 87-year-old Arion Male Choir of Victoria, will be presented Friday at 8 p.m. at Oak Bay United Church, Mitchell Street. The UCLA Glee Club is currently touring the Pacific Northwest, with concerts in Portland, Spokane, Seattle, Vancouver and several other centres.

Directed by Donn Weiss, the Glee Club is considered one of the premier male choral organizations in the United States. The group's repertoire for the current concert season offers a unique musical experience. Featured is the sacred music of Monteverdi, Schuetz and Allegri, the Slovak songs of Bartok and music of other 20th century composers, traditional folk songs and spirituals, and, as a conclusion, music of the Beatles arranged for the group by Weiss.

Conducting the Arion Choir is Tony Nicholas, a graduate in music of Trinity College, London. He has had 20 years experience in conducting choral groups. Currently he is teaching music and French in the public school system.

The Arion Choir has made two concert tours of Britain and taken part in the Welsh Music Festival. Its repertoire includes sacred music, sea chanteys, spirituals and standard songs.

Tickets at $2.50, students and senior citizens, $1.50, will be available at the door or may be purchased in advance at the church office.

Ann Mortifee Returning to MacPherson

Success — the heady kind that accompanies and follows audience acclaim — is a familiar experience to Canadian singer and writer of haunting musical scores, Ann Mortifee.

Born in Durban, South Africa, but mostly a resident of Vancouver since the late 50s, Ann's musical ability was early recognized by family and friends but surfaced with a splash when she collaborated on the score of George Ryga's The Ecstasy of Rita Joe. By that time she had been singing professionally since 1964, but it was Rita Joe that took her to Ottawa and launched her in a 10-week TV series entitled Both Sides Now.

Ottawa introduced Ann to New York with the Canadian musical revue Love and Maple Syrup, which played successsfully off-Broadway. She stayed in New York for more than a year before returning to Vancouver to write and perform.

Ann Mortifee pays her second visit in three years to McPherson Playhouse Monday.She will be accompanied by three multi-talented musicians of long association: Doug Edwards, Robbie King and Tom Hazlitt.

Among Ann's achievements have been her ballet scores, including the adaptation of Rita Joe for the Royal Winnipeg and Klee Wyck: A Ballet for Emily. She toured in the United States in Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris and was in the cast of the original Vancouver production which ran for eight months. In a later Broadway production of Brel she impressed critics by receiving nightly standing ovations. Her first solo album, made at EMI's London studios, was also well received.

Since last performing here she has travelled extensively and written a substantial number of new songs. She expects soon to record a second album and plans to remount a version of her One Woman Show, which played to sold out audiences for six weeks at the Vancouver Arts Club Theatre in 1976.

Steve Petch Play at Stratford

To be produced as part of the Stratford Festival this summer is a play by a young Canadian writer, Vancouver-born Steve Petch, son of University of Victoria president, Dr. Howard E. Petch.

The play, entitled Victoria, is Steve Petch's fourth of five stage works, the others being The General, Turkish Delight, Aftershock, and the most recent, Sight Unseen, which is being performed at Toronto's Tarragon Theatre this month and receiving excellent reviews.

Victoria is a modern drama about three surviving members of a family trying to reconstruct some sense of family feeling as they recall the past when their father/husband was alive. Its Stratford production will be directed by gifted Kathryn Shaw, the acclaimed and recently appointed artistic director of Vancouver's professional Westcoast Actors and an associate director of Toronto's New Play Centre.

Design for Victoria will be by Susan LePage, who is also working as an assistant on other Festival plays in the designer-in-training program. The premiere will feature in its cast John Cutts, Karen Austin, Richard McMillan, Jennifer Phipps and Tom Wood.

Jennifer Phipps, an award-winning actress who has been performing leading roles in Canadian theatres since the early 1960s, will be remembered by Festival audiences for her Mistress Peg in The Merry Wives of Windsor, and Tamora in Titus Andronicus last year.

Petch, 26, a graduate of the University of Waterloo, has been writing professionally for some time. Some of his work has been in journalism but his special field now is theatre ... "the stage that is. I haven't tackled television or radio yet."

Stratford commissioned him to write Victoria, which goes into rehearsal next month. Most new plays go through several workshop situations, as Sight Unseen has done, says Petch.

"The object is to find the weaknesses and make needed changes and additions before the play goes into rehearsal for a major performance. This saves time and money. It's also easier on the actors than having to re-do scenes and learn new dialogue in an advanced rehearsal stage."

The system of workshops is also a kind of insurance for the producers as theatres just can't afford to have a play fail under present economic conditions, he points out.

After Stratford Steve Petch is looking toward a holiday abroad somewhere: "A time to look around, relax and sort through ideas," he says.

Elijah Oratorio at UVic

One of the greatest oratorios ever written, Mendelssohn's heroic Elijah, is to be performed in its entirety by the 260-member University of Victoria Chorus and Orchestra at the University Centre auditorium next Friday, March 30, and Sunday, April 1.

Conductor George Corwin will direct the chorus and orchestra and guest soloists. The chorus is the same group that successfully performed Beethoven's choral Ninth Symphony and Handel's Messiah earlier this year. Soloists include noted Canadian baritone Bernard Turgeon, who is currently head voice instructor at UVic's School of Music. He will be heard in the role of Elijah. Soprano and mezzo roles will be taken by Ingrid Suderman and Audrey Glass of Vancouver. Larry Benson will sing the tenor part.

Both concerts are benefit performances for the UVic Taylor Music Scholarship Fund. This fund was established in 1968 in honor of the University's first president, Dr. Malcolm G. Taylor. It is available to outstanding students in any year of study in the Bachelor of Music program and has so far provided 14 students with financial assistance. The capital for the fund comes from donations and concert revenue.

Tickets for the performances of Elijah are available at the University Centre and Hillside Mall ticket centre.

New Work By Wyman

Premiering two new works, the Anna Wyman Dance Theatre, one of Canada's best contemporary dance companies, returns to the McPherson Playhouse Thursday at 8 p.m. after almost a year's absence.

Dawn to Dusk, a piece set to the intense jazz piano styling of Keith Jarrett, will depict the tedium of exercise and rehearsal and the emotional tension dancers face in their daily routines.

Kinesis, the second work on the program, is a dynamic choreography defining the word "energy" in the dancer's vocabulary of body motion.

‘Doing Nothing’ for Women

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Justice Minister Marc Lalonde took the provinces to task Friday for doing virtually nothing to better the lot of women.

"No provincial government has yet adopted an over-all plan for improving women's status, accompanied by the necessary government machinery to ensure its implementation," Lalonde told an audience of university students.

The minister, whose responsibilities include women's issues, said such areas as health and social services, education, and the implementation of family law fall under provincial jurisdiction. And nine out of every 10 Canadians workers are governed by provincial labor laws.

"Where provinces have fundamental responsibilities they must propose action and take the lead," Lalonde said.

He admitted Quebec has taken a major step with the report of its Council of the Status of Women. The report was handed down last year but council president Claire Bonenfant has since chastised the province for not taking quick action on it.

Lalonde said he had written to all 10 provinces asking them for suggestions for a national policy for women. Not all responded, but the ones which did indicated they'd rather handle the matter themselves.

"All we (Ottawa) can do then is offer our support," he said.

Lalonde, however, refused to specify when long-awaited federal reforms to rape provisions in the Criminal Code would become law.

He said the changes would consider rape as a form of assault rather than as a moral offence — a fundamental change long demanded by feminists. But he added he was reluctant to introduce legislation to the House of Commons with a general election in the offing.

Lalonde's audience of 65, almost all women, appeared skeptical of his intentions. In a give-and-take session after his 90-minute speech, one student attacked his talk about women's equality as a mere "electoral gimmick."

Another bitterly recalled the case of Dalila Maschino, a Concordia student who was spirited away to her native Algeria last summer to marry a Moslem chosen by her wealthy brother.

The incident is a cause celebre among Montreal feminists who say the Canadian government dodged the issue.

Alberta Cabinet Grows

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed announced the largest provincial cabinet in Canada on Friday, appointing 13 new members to vacancies and new portfolios in the 29-member executive council.

He also announced the government caucus will be given more responsibility than before, with backbenchers being appointed to government boards and agencies for which they will be answerable in the legislature. Delegations presenting briefs to the legislature will see caucus committee chairmen first instead of going directly to cabinet ministers.

Dr. Hugh Horner, one of 16 ministers re-elected and remaining in cabinet, retains his post as deputy premier.

Horner also heads a new economic development ministry, a portfolio Lougheed said will have broad responsibility in areas dealing with freight rates, international trade and stimulation of the province's agricultural and petrochemical processing industries.

Merv Leitch moves from the provincial treasurer post to take over the energy ministry vacated by Don Getty, one of nine ministers who did not stand for re-election March 14.

In other top portfolios, former intergovernmental affairs minister Lou Hyndman takes over as provincial treasurer, Neil Crawford moves from labor to become attorney-general and government House Leader, Dave Russell moves from environment to hospitals and medical care, and Marvin Moore moves to municipal affairs from agriculture.

Those six ministers and Lougheed form an inner cabinet known as the cabinet priorities committee and also comprise the treasury board.

Lougheed appointed two freshman MLAs to his cabinet, one of whom replaces former social service minister Helen Hunley as the only woman in cabinet.

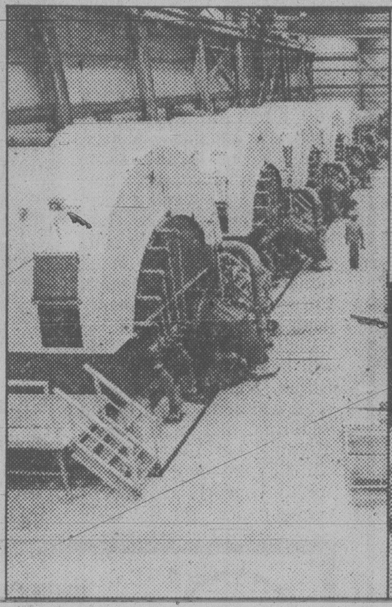
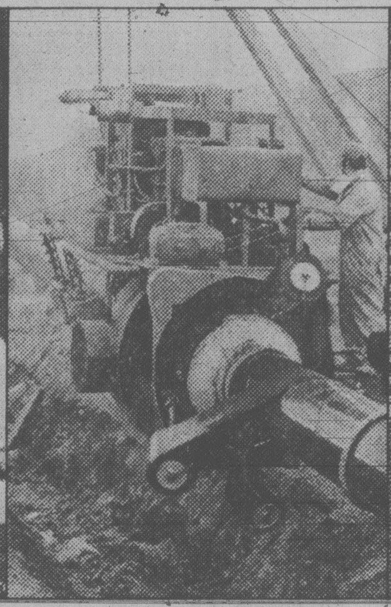
5 FREE SHARES IN THE BRITISH COLUMBIA RESOURCES INVESTMENT CORPORATION...



You will share in 81% of Canadian Cellulose.

You will share in oil and gas exploration rights in northeastern B.C.



You will share in 10% of Westcoast Transmission.

You will share in 100% of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills.

and own a piece of these growing B.C. resource enterprises.

What do B.C.R.I.C. shares represent?

The B.C. Resources Investment Corporation is the holding company for shares held by the province in a variety of B.C. resource industries and enterprises. B.C.R.I.C. holds 81% of the common shares of Canadian Cellulose, 100% of the common shares of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills, 10% of the common shares of Westcoast Transmission, plus oil and gas rights in a vast area of northeastern B.C.—investments transferred at a value of over $151 million. B.C.R.I.C. shares represent partial ownership of this whole range of enterprises.

Who qualifies?

Every person who has lived in B.C. for the past year—and who holds or has qualified and applied for [illegible] citizenship—is eligible for five free shares in B.C.R.I.C. Those 16 years of age and over should apply for shares on their own behalf. For children under 16, application should be made by the mother or guardian. Infants, born in B.C. on or before June 15, 1979 and resident here since birth, also qualify for free shares. Application, again, should be made by the mother or guardian.

Free shares are also available to those ordinarily resident in B.C. who have been temporarily absent from the province during the 12 months immediately preceding the offer, provided such persons are otherwise eligible.

To apply.

Application forms are available at banks, trust companies, credit unions and investment dealers throughout B.C. When making application, you must present two of the following pieces of identification: a.) driver's licence; b.) Social Insurance card; c.) Medical Plan card. If you are 65 years of age or over, a Pharmacare card is sufficient proof of identity.

Mothers or guardians applying for children under 16 are required to furnish only a medical plan number or a birth certificate for such children. Young people, 16 and over, who have not yet received such identification, may establish their eligibility by presenting their birth certificate or other acceptable identification—in person—at the office of their local Government Agent (or, in the Lower Mainland, at their local Motor Vehicle Branch office).

Those unable to apply in person may delegate a suitable individual to act on their behalf—that person must utilize a Power of Attorney form, available where applications are made.

Applications for free shares will be accepted only until June 15, 1979. Distribution of these shares by B.C.R.I.C. will begin immediately after British Columbia Day, August 6, 1979. The person making application has until September 30, 1979 to pick up the shares.

Additional shares.

If you qualify for free shares, you have the option of purchasing up to 5,000 additional shares at a price substantially below their underlying value. This price will be specified on your application form.

No individual or corporation may own more than 1% of the voting shares of B.C.R.I.C. (although pension funds may own up to 3%). Corporations and pension funds, however, are not allowed to participate in the intial share issue.

Can I sell later?

Yes. Stock market trading in shares is expected to commence shortly after the distribution date. At this point, a "market value" will be established. However, it is hoped that most British Columbians will not only retain, but enlarge, their share holdings. In this way, they will participate directly in the continued expansion of our resource industries, while ensuring that control of these industries remains in B.C.

Other questions?

For further information on the free share offer—or about B.C.R.I.C.—contact: B.C. Government Public Information. In Vancouver, phone 873-3455. In Victoria, phone 387-6121.

In other areas, information is available through your local Government Agent.

Stanfield Gets Last Zap?

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "Zap, you're frozen!"

Remember that 1974 election slogan Prime Minister Trudeau used to ridicule the Conservatives' advocacy of wage and price controls?

It came back to haunt the Liberals Friday in the Commons, and it was sweet revenge for MP Robert Stanfield.

The former Tory leader, who will retire from Parliament when the next election is called, had Liberal MP's squirming and the opposition in laughter as he attacked the government's inflation-fighting record.

Stanfield took Finance minister Jean Chretien to task for his remark earlier this week that the annual inflation rate is "a bit high."

What had happened to the "fiery desire" of the PM "to wrestle inflation to the ground," he inquired sarcastically?

"Why," Stanfield continued, "is the minister of finance now almost accepting the current rate of inflation?"

Then the former Tory leader delivered his punch line: "Do the minister of finance and his colleagues say nothing more than, 'Zap, you are frozen at a rate of inflation of eight to nine per cent?' "

Stanfield noted that the government, which imposed in 1975 a wage-price control program more sweeping than the Tories had advocated, promised four years ago that the current inflation rate would be four per cent.

Chretien replied that he expects inflation will be reduced during 1979 but "not as low as everyone would like to see it."

The Finance minister said "world conditions" — including oil price increases — were factors that "will make it very difficult to reach the goal we have in mind and have a very low rate or even a zero rate of inflation."

Chretien did not specify the level to which he expects the inflation rate will drop by yearend.

"Despite the decline of the decline of the Canadian dollar in relation to the American dollar," he added, "our rate of inflation is lower than that of the United States."

MP for Probe Of Bread Price

OTTAWA (FP) — The National Commission on Inflation has been asked to launch an investigation into the recent increases in the price of bread.

Herb Gray (L—Windsor West), a former member of Trudeau's cabinet, was transferred out after the 1974 election during a cabinet shuffle. He has sent a letter to Harold Renouf, chairman of the commission formally requesting the probe into bread prices.

He asked that the investigation be made to determine the exact reason for the increases and whether they were justified in the light of all the relevant circumstances.

"I am also writing to request that if your commission decides that the increases in the price of bread are unwarranted, it will then immediately enter into a discussion with the bakers in order to get them to agree to reduce their prices to a more appropriate level," wrote Gray. His letter is dated March 22.

It has been suggested that the price for bread increased by seven cents after the removal of the government subsidy on wheat used to bake this bread, even though the subsidy per loaf was approximately 3.2 cents, Gray noted.

Doctor Pullout Blasted

OTTAWA (CP) — Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney urged the hierarchy of the federal New Democratic Party Friday to make an election issue of the withdrawal of doctors from government-run medical insurance.

Blakeney told about 50 members of the NDP federal council that doctors are saying: "Go see your doctor, but take your tin cup because you've got to ask for charity."

Socialized medical insurance was pioneered in Saskatchewan during the 1960s by its Canadian Commonwealth Federation premier, T. C. (Tommy) Douglas, who later became federal NDP leader and now is a British Columbia MP.

In an emotional address, Blakeney told the party strategists they owed it to Douglas to fight for survival of medical insurance so that all Canadians can afford proper health care.

"We better get out and deliver for Tommy," Blakeney said, referring to the federal election expected to be held within a few months.

Doctors are opting out of the system so they can charge patients fees higher than the government-run insurance plans pay them.

Michael Cassidy, Ontario NDP leader, also condemned doctors for withdrawing fron the system.

In Ontario, 18 per cent of doctors have opted out, he said, and they are charging fees an average of 43 per cent above the government-set rates.

309 IN MEMORIAM

WEST: In loving memory of my dear Husband and father, Mervyn Earl (Bud) West, who passed away March 11, 1972.

There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went,
There is someone who thinks of you daily,
And tries to be brave and content.
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget.
But time so far has only proven,
How much we miss you yet.
God gave us strength to carry on,
And courage to bear the blow,
But what it meant to lose you, Bud
No one but God will know.

Sadly missed by his loving wife, Jane and sons Ronald and Gary, daughter-in-law, Barbara.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

Information Bill in Month?

Barring a call for a federal election, legislation that would give citizens greater access to government information should be tabled in the House of Commons within a month, Secretary of State John Roberts announced here Friday.

Speaking at a national freedom of information conference at University of Victoria, Roberts said draft legislation, 21 months in the making, is now in the hands of cabinet.

"If Parliament continues for another two or three weeks I believe there will be an opportunity to introduce the legislation and give some debate before the next election," he said.

Roberts said the new bill, which will be called the Access to Information Bill, allows for the creation of an information commissioner and will open the door to a storehouse of information except in eight sensitive areas.

These include information that would:

— Be injurious to international relations, federal-provincial relations, national defence and security, or disclose a confidence of cabinet;

— Disclose information obtained by a government investigatory body looking into crimes or acts against Parliament or reveal investigations, testing or plans where disclosure might prejudice the results of those investigations or tests;

— Threaten the safety of any indidvual;

— Disclose personal information in contravention of the Canadian Human Rights Act;

— Disclose legal opinions or advice submitted to government on a lawyer-client basis;

— Disclose information given to the government in the form of a voluntary submission before the Access to Information Act came into effect;

— Provide details concerning financial, commercial, scientific or technical matters which are supplied to government on a confidential basis;

— Reveal opinions and advice of a subjective nature supplied by doctors.

Roberts said the information commissioner would have ombudsman-like powers with access to all government documents except those relating to international relations, national defence and security, provincial-federal relations or cabinet matters. His authority would supercede that of a minister in all other areas.

The commissioner would be directly responsible to Parliament and be hired for a seven-year term, he said.

Fees will be charged anyone using the service but cabinet has not yet set the amounts.

Roberts lambasted the Canadian Bar Association for its contention that the review process should be vested in the judiciary.

"We agree there should be an independent review process," he said.

But, he added, the courts have no natural role in acting as arbiters in such matters.

Reaction among the 100 or so delegates attending the conference was mixed. As Roberts had not released a copy of his text, most delegates said they preferred to adopt a "wait-and-see" attitude until they had a chance to study the proposed bill.

However, Toronto lawyer Peter Grant, chairman of a special freedom of information committee of the Canadian Bar Association, said later the federal government's proposal appears to fall far short of what the CBA is seeking in its model bill released by association president Thomas Walsh on Thursday.

He said the exemptions proposed by the government are "so wide you could drive a truck through them" and reiterated a comment Walsh made on Thursday that it will likely be 10 years before Canadians ever see meaningful freedom of information legislation.

During his speech Roberts criticized Walsh for the comment.

"I wish the president of the Canadian Bar Association would avoid making cheap political shots," he chided.

He said the bar association had done a disservice by withholding its model bill until Thursday.

"It would have been far more helpful if the bar had given us its bill in time to influence the drafting of our own," he said.

Roberts could not say what effect, if any, the CBA's model bill will have in the final drafting of the government's bill.

Free Information Laws Questioned

Freedom of information legislation could seriously affect police investigations and possibly create an ever greater logjam in the courts, the regional Crown counsel for Vancouver says.

Allan Filmer said that in some parts of the United States law enforcement has ground to a halt because of the legislation.

"I know for a fact the FBI has been seriously hurt by freedom of information," Filmer told about 100 delegates attending a national conference on freedom of information at the University of Victoria Friday.

He cited one example of police in New Jersey now refusing to supply the FBI with any information on organized crime investigations because the information may be subsequently released.

‘Bungle’ Stalls Energy Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's emergency energy supplies legislation, introduced in mid-February, cleared its last parliamentary hurdle Friday as the Senate gave third and final reading to the bill.

However, royal assent that would have made the bill law was postponed at the last minute when the Commons, unknown to the Senate, adjourned early for the weekend. Both houses of Parliament must be sitting for royal assent to take place.

Conservative Whip Steve Paproski forced the Commons to adjourn 35 minutes early because there were only 17 members present. He also served notice that Conservatives will force Liberals to stick to Commons attendance rules — which require a minimum of 20 of 264 members to do business — from now until Parliament is dissolved for an election.

"This is a colossal piece of government bungling," declared Ontario Conservative Allister Grosart.

The Senate had agreed to speed consideration of the bill that passed the Commons Wednesday. Conservative House Leader Jacques Flynn had jokingly said this would allow Prime Minister Trudeau to call an election today.

When a day-long grilling of Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie over details of the bill concluded in the upper chamber, Supreme Court Justice Yves Pratte had already arrived on Parliament Hill to grant royal assent.

FINE FINESSE
Played in the 1978 Bagneux, France, Tournament.

BLACK: N.Giffard, France,
WHITE: John Peters, U.S.

The position after White's 36th move is:

WHITE: King on KRL, Queen on KR4, Rook on KN1, Knights on QR4 and Q6; Pawns on QR2, QN3, K5, KB4, KN2 and KR3 (11 pieces).

BLACK: King on KN2, Queen on Q6, Rook on QB7, Bishop on K3, Knight on KN5, pawns on QR2, QN3, KB2, KN3 and KR2 (10 pieces).

White has just played 36. P-KR3, attacking the Knight. Now Giffard has the word. With a series of pins and needle moves, he puts Peters, in spite of his pawn up, in a difficult position and has his King on the run.

2 Years for 'Jungle' Death

Two Skid Road habituees were given their last chance in Supreme Court Friday when they were sentenced to two years less one day in jail for the drunken beating of a fellow inhabitant of an area known as The Jungle which used to exist near the Johnson Street Bridge.

George Alexander Charlie, 25, and Alfred Eugene Johnny, 33, will also serve two years on probation after their jail sentence is completed. Conditions of probation include no consumption of alcohol, report to bail supervisor monthly, no possession of weapons, remain within B.C. and abide by any recommendation of the probation officer for alcohol counselling and rehabilitation.

In addition, Mr. Justice Martin Taylor ordered both men not to have firearms in their possession for 10 years.

Both men pleaded guilty Wednesday to manslaughter of 37-year-old George Preston Gus in the early hours of July 21 at the rear of 1610 Store Street.

Taylor told Charlie and Johnny that he hoped they will be able to learn to live without alcohol and will be able to take advantage of their last chance. He strongly recommended they be imprisoned at the Alouette River Unit which offers alcoholic counselling.

In sentencing them, he said The Jungle existed in the middle of the most beautiful city in B.C. and within sight of the Legislative Building but there was no apparent concern or action by the community and it was only after the manslaughter that the area was demolished.

The daily ritual of the habituees was to consume wine until they passed out.

Charlie and Johnny must bear responsibility for their actions even though they did not intend to kill Gus.

But Taylor said a society which distributes alcohol for profit can hardly treat with contempt the inevitable result of persons whose lives are destroyed by it.

The lives of Charlie and Johnny can only be changed if they are cured of addiction to alcohol. He was not prepared to say the day has come when they cannot be cured but this was the last chance they can expect.

He noted that both men have spent eight months in jail.

Court was told that two days before the beating Gus raped a woman with whom Johnny was living and she told Johnny and Charlie the next day.

That day, and through the evening, there was heavy drinking. Gus visited Johnny and kicked him in the head and told him he would try to rape the woman again. Johnny went after Gus and kicked him in the stomach and head, knocking him down.

A little later, Johnny met Charlie and the two of them went back to find Gus lying down and they kicked him and Charlie hit him with a stick.

Their stated objective was to teach Gus a lesson. Gus, who received seven broken ribs and other injuries, had a blood alcohol reading of .29 which Taylor described as a very high reading.

Defence counsel Robert Johnston and Derek Brindle said it was not a premeditated act and both men had expressed remorse that Gus died later from the beating.

Information Bank Thefts Baffle Gov't

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The possibility of theft from the federal government's personal information banks stored in computers in Ottawa is causing grave concern to officials, according to Privacy Commissioner Inger Hansen.

Hansen, who was attending the national freedom of information conference at UVic, said in an interview Friday that with the massive proliferation of information banks the problem has reached a crucial stage, and one for which there appears to be no ready answer.

She said a special committee of officials and computer experts have been meeting in Ottawa to try to find ways of plugging the holes. But so far they have not been able to come up with a fool-proof solution.

"The crucial question now is how to prevent theft of information and the corrupt passing of information from bank to bank and organization to organization," she said.

Hansen said that just about any information can be illegally obtained from the computer banks "if the price is right."

She said computer thefts has become a major concern in other areas, too. She has heard of fractions of interest payments to customers being syphoned off and crediting to other accounts. The money is then transferred to numbered bank accounts in Switzerland.

In most cases the customers are unaware they are being robbed because the individual amounts taken are so small. But multiply the amounts thousands-fold and it represents a huge profit.

Hansen said that at present the government has 1,500 personal information banks in Ottawa, all under the control of the Treasury Board.

About 23 of the banks are totally closed except to a handful of officials in each ministry concerned.

A provision of the Human Rights Act, passed by Parliament in July, 1977, and in effect since March 1, 1978, gives every citizen the opportunity to petition the government for release of information about themselves.

Hansen's job is to assist citizens in getting information stored in the open banks. She and her staff of three investigators have access to the closed banks too, but only for investigative purposes and on certain conditions.

Hansen said that in the first 10 months, her office handled 611 requests for assistance in getting information. She was unable to give a total number of requests denied but said 18 were turned down because the release of information might endanger national defence or security.

She said there is a tremendous onus on the government to keep the information stored in banks confidential.

Meet The Stars

Robert De Niro has gained recognition as one of the top young actors in Hollywood in a career that began in 1969 and really took off when he won the Academy Award in a supporting role for the 1974 film Godfather II.

In 1976 he was nominated best actor for Taxi Driver and also won praise for his role in the F. Scott Fitzgerald story The Last Tycoon in the same year.

His starring role in The Deerhunter in 1978 has been widely acclaimed and was probably the most demanding of the year.

De Niro is up against Sir Laurence Olivier, Gary Busey, Warren Beatty, and Jon Voight for the Academy Award.

Readers who enter the annual Victoria Times-VI90 Visit the Stars contest and correctly predict the winner, along with best actress and best movie will have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood or one of five runner-up awards.

Full details and entry form are in the advertisement on page 12.

CP Air on Even Terms

OTTAWA (UPC) — After 12 years of being relegated — officially — to the number two spot among Canadian airlines, CP Air has won the right to compete with the government-owned Air Canada on an equal footing.

The federal government Friday dropped its restrictions on CP Air to permit the carrier the right to compete with the national flag-carrier on all domestic routes.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said the Vancouver-based airline, limited to 28 per cent of the Canadian market since 1967, will be able to sell as many seats as it wishes. International flights were not affected by the 28 per cent limit.

"Appropriate steps will be taken to monitor the situation to ensure that there will not be wasteful competition between CP Air and Air Canada resulting in any significant decline in passenger load factors nor in a deterioration of service to small communities," Lang said.

In Vancouver, CP Air President Ian Gary greeted Lang's announcement with jubilation. "We are finally off the ground," he said happily.

Another CP Air spokesman said the airline plans to add more flights to its domestic schedules.

He said the airline will have to decide whether more aircraft will be purchased and what routes will see more competition.

"We have to know just what the market is before we go out and buy more airplanes," he said. "And we have to decide what routes now dominated by Air Canada are profitable."

Of CP Air's 7,000 employees, 6,300 are employed in Canada on an annual payroll of $130 million.

B.C. Planning Open Season On Arsonists

VANCOUVER (CP) — Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Friday the British Columbia government will announce an arson counter-attack program next week. The program calls for police street patrols in areas most frequently hit with arson attacks, he said.

BATvan Halts 785 Vehicles

The roving BATvan was out on the streets of Saanich Friday night with police stopping 785 vehicles.

Nine motorists were given 24-hour roadside suspensions, a number of others were ticketed for offences under the Government Liquor Act, but no one was charged with impaired driving.

White Knuckle Ride? Never Like This Again

There are white-knuckle rides and there are white-knuckle rides. But Glenn Lawson's ride Friday night was something else again.

Police said Lawson, 29, of 1821 Fairfield, was riding his motorcycle down Shelbourne at about 11:30 when he was cut off by a small car carrying two men and two women.

Lawson managed to catch up to the car stopped at the light at Hillside, where he got off and approached the driver to give him a piece of his mind.

But, the spokesman said, the foursome inside locked their doors, rolled down their windows a fraction, and began to hurl abuse at him.

As Lawson walked around to the back, the driver suddenly put his car in reverse and plowed into Lawson's bike.

Infuriated, Lawson ran over and grabbed the window, whereupon the driver took off.

According to the police report, the car reached speeds of 60 to 70 miles an hour with Lawson desperately clinging onto the outside. Several times the driver smashed at Lawson's fingers to get him to release his grip.

Finally, a half mile down the road at Haultain the car pulled over and Lawson fell off.

His only injuries, the spokesman said, were two sore hands and bruised pride.

Police today are searching for the car.

Gromyko Trip Flaunts Treaty

Times News Services

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union, warning the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty will not bring peace to the Middle East, today dispatched Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Damascus to encourage Arab opposition to the pact.

And the official Communist Party daily Pravda said in a brief editorial, entitled "A Riposte," that the peace treaty, scheduled to be signed Monday in Washington, has already unleashed an arms race in the explosive Middle East area.

Pravda quoted U.S. news reports that the United States will sell $3 billion worth of military hardware to Israel and $2.5 billion to Egypt after the signing of the treaty.

"A parallel probably cannot be found in history when the conclusion of a peace treaty was accompanied by the unleashing of such an arms race," Pravda commented.

Meanwhile, Sadat said on leaving Cairo that he was "happy, extremely happy" with the treaty progress.

The Egyptian leader, accompanied by his family and top Egyptian officials, left Cairo international airport aboard the presidential jetliner.

Officials said he would make a refuelling stop in the Azores then continue on his 14-hour flight to Washington.

Sadat originally planned to stop overnight in Madrid for talks with Spain's King Juan Carlos, but Egyptian officials said the trip was cancelled for security reasons.

Computer File Crackdown On Juveniles

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police plan a juvenile crime crackdown with a new project that will feed information on the worst delinquents into the police computer system.

Judge Doug Campbell, administrative judge for Vancouver family court, said Operation Checkpoint was created by the four judges in his court and city police.

Police and probation officers are compiling a list of about 50 juvenile delinquents for inclusion in the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC).

When Operation Checkpoint begins next month, police will have immediate access to the names and terms of bail or probation of juvenile offenders.

If police find a youth in breach of conditions set by the [illegible] they will — on prior orders from a judge — have the authority to arrest him without a warrant.

"For all but a very few children, we have the tools to cope with reforming their behavior," Campbell said.

CPIC is needed for the small number of juveniles who need more stringent control, he said.

The information police will get through CPIC will include the youth's birthdate, and terms of bail or conditions imposed by the court.

The preliminary list of 50 juveniles for CPIC will be passed onto the Crown and each child will be the subject of a family court hearing before his name goes into the computer.

Jim Dybikowski, an executive officer of the British Columbia Civil Liberties Association, said Thursday that he has reservations about the effect of Operation Checkpoint because of "the possibility of it being used as a pretext for stopping juveniles."

He said there should be firm assurances that the information will be purged from the system once the probation or bail order is up.

CLC Worth 60 NDP Seats?

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) could deliver up to 60 seats to the New Democratic Party during the next federal election, says a party document.

The document, which provides in-depth details of the CLC's plans for the next election campaign, was released at a weekend meeting of the NDP federal council by Robin Sears, national campaign director.

Under the theme, Canadian Labor Calling, the 2.3-million-member congress plans to harness its resources in a campaign to elect NDP candidates to Parliament.

The labor group's campaign will run parallel to the party's, although the two electoral efforts will be co-ordinated extensively.

"If the program works, the votes of trade unionists and their families can determine the outcome in more than 60 ridings across Canada," Sears writes. The party now has 17 MPs in the 264-seat Commons.

Sears mentions four stages to the CLC's campaign:

—Already labor activists are being trained in seminars across the country on how to woo their colleagues to the NDP;

—During the campaign, central phone-in offices will be established, permitting trade unionists "to be addressed in their own language, by a member of their union, on issues they care about;"

—Campaign literature designed by members of both the CLC and NDP will be mailed to local union representatives so they can become familiar with the goals of the campaign;

—"Finally, a series of one-day visits by trade union officers to priority ridings is being planned for the election itself. These visits are to include some plant-gating, a media event, meetings with local union activitists and the local party campaign."

The upcoming election is expected to cost Canadian taxpayers $52 million — 23 per cent more than an election expected a year ago — says Jean Marc Hamel, chief electoral officer.

Election costs were predicted to be about $42 million last year when "everybody expected an election," Hamel said during the taping of an interview with Standard Broadcast News scheduled for broadcast today.

The increased costs are a result partly of inflation and partly of expected increases in wages for many electoral office workers. Proposals for increases in these wages are currently before cabinet, Hamel said, and they are expected to be approved.

When that mysterious phone call came one day, my initial reaction was Good Grief! Must be a joke.

But no. Sure enough it was confirmed later by a letter. The Capital of the Age of Enlightenment — otherwise known as the Victoria Transcendental Meditation Centre — wanted to present me with the Maharishi Award for my "outstanding, successful and inspiring contribution to the communications field."

The Maharishi Awards, John Ward, chairman of the Victoria TM Centre, explained in his letter, are part of a world-wide celebration being held in more than 100 countries to usher in the spring season by honoring 10 of the most accomplished citizens of each city.

"This Age of Enlightenment celebration is the result of the wave of success which has accompanied the teaching of the Transcendental Meditation program to about two million people throughout the world in the last 20 years, and to about 8,000 in Victoria since 1962 when the movement got going here," the letter said.

Previous outstanding citizens to be honored with an award for excellence in their particular field include conductor Laszlo Gati, Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo, MLA Charles Barber, former MLA Scott Wallace, musician Paul Horn, Victoria Mayor Michael Young, former Mayor Peter Pollen, artist Brian Travers-Smith and (in the media line) Ida Clarkson, John Makin and Gorde Hunter.

And so because, apart from the odd reward for athletic endeavors at a much younger age, I had never before received an award and because it's highly unlikely that I ever will again, I decided to go along to the ceremonies Thursday night at the Victoria Golf Club.

There was John Ward greeting everyone in the foyer and explaining that they just wanted to honor the most successful people in the community — people who haven't had the recognition they deserve. I said thanks, I'd tell my boss.

There was a symbolic cutting of a huge cake inscribed with the map of the world and the lighting of long candles planted in the middle of each continent.

There was lovely Marney Ward explaining TM procedures for us non-thinkers and pointing out that this has been declared by the Maharishi as the Year of All Possibilities. Must keep that in mind.

There was MC for the evening Roger Smeeth outlining the domain of the World Government of the Age of Enlightenment as the "Domain of Consciousness" and saying that in no way does it conflict with the domain of more earthly governments.

And there was a delightful snack supper followed by a dance.

In between, there were the awards in 10 categories with words of praise by the presenters and replies by the recipients. And believe me, I found myself in some pretty heavy company as far as credentials were concerned.

Like Robin and Winnifred Wood of the Victoria Conservatory of Music, who were honored for their "high level of creativity in the community," and who spoke delightfully of joy and loving and said that is what music is all about.

Like that ideas man of Victoria theatre, Alan Purdy, actor, director and producer, who was honored as "most enlightened public leader" for his work as president of the McPherson Playhouse Foundation.

Then there were Sister Bede Sullivan, a Benedictine nun reknowned for her work in adult education; Elizabeth Creery, who established and runs Transition House for women; Dr. Bruce Andrews, who developed the University of Victoria's successful internship program for student-teachers; Dr. William Gaddes, famed for his work in neuropsychology; and Ray Couvelier, president of the Victoria branch of the Red Cross Society.

And there was Sohan Jawl, a self-made businessman who rose from a truck-driver and founed Jawl Enterprises, honored in the prosperity and progress category; and Philip Delesalle, Canada's most outstanding gymnast ever, who received the award for health and immortality.

As I sat listening to all the lists of accomplishments, I started to think I was in the wrong place and to wonder what on earth someone could say about me. Kindly, presenter John Ward listed the two things that came into his mind about my column as "gentleness and a quality of broadness."

And the category in which my award appeared: information and inspiration. As I said at the beginning: Good Grief!

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The saga of how Al Lubkowski and Ursula Prosho bought a 30-foot sailboat and brought her here from Montreal rivals Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors in incredibility.

Shakespeare probably knew well in advance what the ending of his story would be but when Lubkowski and Prosho set sail from Montreal they had no idea their 42-year old sloop Zest would make her final 4,200 mile run from the Florida Keys to her new home port on a trailer behind a 1973 station wagon, bought for $600 to do the job.

Making her way north by land with her spars removed, Zest caused more than a few raised eyebrows as she was hauled along desert highways.

Lubkowski tells about the Alabama couple who asked him if Zest was a submarine.

Others wanted to know if he knew more than they did, was Zest being readied for a coming flood?

The station wagon took 11 days to make the trek, gobbling up a gallon of gas for each seven miles at a total cost of $500.

Lubkowski admits going down hills with brakes you can't trust and a 10,000 pound load behind you is an experience he'd rather not repeat again.

The saga began in Calgary three years ago where Lubkowski was working as an onsite planner for Parks Canada and Prosho was director of a day-care centre.

The combination of Fireball dinghy sailing on Glenmore Reservoir and stories of ocean cruising in yachting magazines convinced them that sailing off into the sunset to the Carribean and other romantic places was the life for them.

When they first saw Zest she was sitting at the far end of a shed just outside Montreal. They fell in love with her sleek lines in spite of the fact she was obviously in need of a major renovation job.

In their inexperienced eyes she was an ocean racer. They did not realize that she was one of the English-built Teal boats that were designed as around-the-buoy racers and weekend cruisers.

They were only too willing to be convinced by a friend that the boat was a steal at $1,500 and that $2,000 at most in materials and perhaps two months of work would see them setting sail on the voyage of their dreams.

They were $6,000 poorer and it was eight months later by the time Zest was in any condition to be put in the water.

Meanwhile, among other catastrophies, Zest had barely escaped demolition when the roof of the shed she was in collapsed during a storm.

Even putting her in the water was a headache. The marina where she was stored had gone bankrupt and there was no crane to lower her in. She had to be hauled by a flat-top to the nearest facility.

Finally they were off; their objective to sail Zest to British Columbia via the Panama Canal. They made leisurely stopovers during the 2½ months it took to get to the Florida Keys.

So confident were they that they would obtain their goal they struck out the B.C. flag at the halfway mark.

They were dumbfounded, however, when they met experienced sailor John Letcher, who is known for the self-steering gear he invented, and were told that going to B.C. would involve an ocean voyage to Hawaii.

It was then they realized that crossing the ocean in Zest would be darned uncomfortable and probably downright dangerous.

Graceful as she may be, Zest had only sitting height inside her cabin. There was no room to carry the water, gas and other supplies they would need. She had no self-bailing cockpit as insurance against being swamped by heavy seas.

After reaching the Florida Keys, Lubkowski and Prosho returned to Canada to earn more money to pay for Zest's last land-locked leg to Victoria.

Lubkowski returned alone to bring their dream boat back, Prosho working in a Victoria day-care centre to help pay expenses.

Lubkowski says it was no mean trick getting the station wagon and trailer on and off the ferry from Anacortes on the last stretch to Victoria.

He was the last to get on the ferry and when they left Zest'a mast was protruding over the ferry's side.

She now sits on the parking lot of the apartmemnt house at 2136 Ridge Road where the couple lives, waiting for a more suitable anchorage and way of life.

CBC Fest Slated Here

The 1979 edition of one of the three top festival events in Canada will be located in Victoria this fall.

The CBC Radio Festival, for which the corporation pulls out all stops, will take place here from Sept. 22 through 29.

The festival will incorporate top artists and groups from across Canada as well as prominent Victoria artists and ensembles, in 10 days of full-scale concert series and performances, many of which will be broadcast nation-wide. The performances will take place at University Centre auditorium, McPherson Playhouse, and possibly the Royal Theatre.

Among those already committed to the festival are the Vancouver Bach Choir, Toronto-based pianist Anton Kuerti and a comedy event entitled Dr. Bundolo's Pandemonium Medicine Show.

With completion of installation of the Clearihue organ at UVic, a leading Canadian organist will probably be brought here and a chamber opera yet to be chosen, will be presented.

At the McPherson, among artists to be featured will be top-ranking Canadian mezzo soprano Judith Forst and Victoria pianist Robin Wood.

The popular CBC afternoon program, Three's Company, will be broadcast from Victoria throughout the week and tentatively planned is a KCTS Nine special program on the festival.

Collaborating locally with CBC producers is UVic information officer Kim Whale.

"This festival is providing far greater opportunity for the whole community than was originally foreseen," says Whale. "Involvment of local professional musicians is increasing for example. CBC provides ample funds for the artists so we are not hampered.

"Leading up to it there will be distribution of thousands of brochures and a TV-radio campaign. The idea will be to create a full city-wide festival atmosphere. With the co-operation of the city and province we hope to have special festival banners raised in all the main streets to celebrate the fall event," he says.

Mika Runs For NDP

Saanich Alderman John Mika announced today he will seek the New Democratic Party nomination for Saanich and the Islands provincial constituency.

"I have decided to let my name stand as a result of urging from party members and a surprisingly large number of independent voters and even other parties," he said.

Mika, 48, is in his third year as an an alderman on Saanich Council and works as a staff assistant to the NDP Caucus.

The NDP nominating meeting will be held April 7 in Keating Elementary School.

Conservatory's Move Paid by Lottery Funds

A provincial lottery grant will accompany the move of Victoria Conservatory of Music to its new home in the St. Ann's Academy annex. Transfer from its present location in Craigdarroch Castle will be accomplished in early September.

The announcement was made Friday, by Hugh Curtis, provincial secretary and minister of government services, at a press conference which included representatives of the conservatory. The lottery grant will cover the first year's rental as well as renovations to the building.

"Victoria Conservatory of Music is one of this province's most important cultural institutions," Curtis stated; "yet it operates without debt and with only a minimum of government support."

He went on to note that he had received overwhelming public support for the conservatory's move in response to his request for ideas for use of St. Ann's Academy.

"However, the main building requires at least two to three years to renovate," he said, "and in view of the conservatory's urgent space problem the annex became a more immediate solution."

"In arranging for this move," Curtis concluded, "we are recognizing that under the guidance of Dr. Robin Wood and with the support of a strong board of directors under Ron Alexander, the conservatory has grown in stature while retaining close contact with this community.

IMPROMTU CONCERT involved Jennifer Wallis, Hugh Curtis, David Thompson and Kerry Chow when Curtis announced the move to St. Ann's.

RCAFA Picks Executive

Raising Thetis Would Kill 360 Trees: Report

A fish and wildlife branch proposal that would raise water levels in Thetis Lake could result in the killing of approximately 360 trees, according to botanists hired by the Thetis Lake Park Nature Sanctuary Association.

The botanists' report, however, also indicates that the lakeshore would re-establish itself at new levels within a number of years.

The report, by botanists Russ George and Margaret Norris, says that higher water levels would flood out 250 trees which are already having difficulty surviving on the lakeshore.

"The proposed increased [illegible] and the month or so additional period of flooding will cause these trees to die," states the report.

It adds that additional trees which would be within or very close to the proposed new shoreline level may also die.

It says that "the lakeshores would require a number of years to return to their present relatively pristine state."

The document also points out that the existing lakeshore was originally established by extensive flooding in 1895 when dams were built to increase the depth of the lakes by [illegible] feet.

In presenting the report to Victoria's city council the Sanctuary Association states that "the likelihood of 360 dead trees is too high a price to pay for retaining water in the Thetis Lakes."

The association adds that it feels the fish and wildlife branch can find other alternatives.

The branch had proposed increasing water storage in the lake by a few inches in order to provide a more continual flow of water into Craigflower Creek during the dry summer months.

The branch is currently undertaking a major rehabilitation program aimed at re-establishing cutthroat trout in the Gorge. The trout spawn in Craigflower and Colquitz Creeks.

Branch biologist Chris Dodd said that only ten cutthroat trout returned to spawn in Craigflower this fall, along with 213 cohoe.

"As far as that creek's concerned we've just about hit rock bottem," he said.

Dodd said the stream, with adequate water flow, has the potential to support thousands of trout and even greater numbers of salmon.

He said the branch could do a lot to improve the stream's habitat "but we can't do any instream work until we've got some water to work with."

At its regular meeting Thursday city council voted to return the fish and wildlife proposal to the parks committee for further study.

The referal was made because of a letter from Allan Murray, assistant deputy minister of the environment ministry, which rejected some of the many conditions the city had attached to the proposal.

Murray said, for instance, that his department could not agree to a restrictive covenant that would ensure that no further pollution or development take place in the upper or lower Thetis Lake watershed.

Murray said that "The provincial government clearly does not have jurisdicition over much of the land in the two watersheds, it therefore could not provide the assurances you request."

Murray added that "It seems that a relatively simple request, as originally envisaged for the betterment of the region as a whole, has been severly set back by a number of side issues."

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who is in full support of the project, said that council had deliberatly sabotaged the project by hanging so many conditions on it that it was bound to sink.

"One of the reasons we put that (pollution covenant) in there was because we knew that government couldn't comply — so that was an easy way out for us.

"The points we put in there were very unfair and virtually impossible to meet."

The announcement was made Friday, by Hugh Curtis, provincial secretary and minister of government services, at a press conference which included representatives of the conservatory. The lottery grant will cover the first year's rental as well as renovations to the building.

"Victoria Conservatory of Music is one of this province's most important cultural institutions," Curtis stated; "yet it operates without debt and with only a minimum of government support."

He went on to note that he had received overwhelming public support for the conservatory's move in response to his request for ideas for use of St. Ann's Academy.

"However, the main building requires at least two to three years to renovate," he said, "and in view of the conservatory's urgent space problem the annex became a more immediate solution."

"In arranging for this move," Curtis concluded, "we are recognizing that under the guidance of Dr. Robin Wood and with the support of a strong board of directors under Ron Alexander, the conservatory has grown in stature while retaining close contact with this community.

IMPROMTU CONCERT involved Jennifer Wallis, Hugh Curtis, David Thompson and Kerry Chow when Curtis announced the move to St. Ann's.

Raising Thetis Would Kill 360 Trees: Report

A fish and wildlife branch proposal that would raise water levels in Thetis Lake could result in the killing of approximately 360 trees, according to botanists hired by the Thetis Lake Park Nature Sanctuary Association.

The botanists' report, however, also indicates that the lakeshore would re-establish itself at new levels within a number of years.

The report, by botanists Russ George and Margaret Norris, says that higher water levels would flood out 250 trees which are already having difficulty surviving on the lakeshore.

"The proposed increased depth and the month or so additional period of flooding will cause these trees to die," states the report.

It adds that additional trees which would be within or very close to the proposed new shoreline level may also die.

It says that "the lakeshores would require a number of years to return to their present relatively pristine state."

The document also points out that the existing lakeshore was originally established by extensive flooding in 1895 when dams were built to increase the depth of the lakes by 15-20 feet.

In presenting the report to Victoria's city council the Sanctuary Association states that "the likelihood of 360 dead trees is too high a price to pay for retaining water in the Thetis Lakes."

The association adds that it feels the fish and wildlife branch can find other alternatives.

The branch had proposed increasing water storage in the lake by a few inches in order to provide a more continual flow of water into Craigflower Creek during the dry summer months.

The branch is currently undertaking a major rehabilitation program aimed at re-establishing cutthroat trout in the Gorge. The trout spawn in Craigflower and Colquitz Creeks.

Branch biologist Chris Dodd said that only ten cutthroat trout returned to spawn in Craigflower this fall, along with 213 coho.

"As far as that creek's concerned we've just about hit rock bottom," he said.

Dodd said the stream, with adequate water flow, has the potential to support thousands of trout and even greater numbers of salmon.

He said the branch could do a lot to improve the stream's habitat "but we can't do any instream work until we've got some water to work with."

At its regular meeting Thursday city council voted to return the fish and wildlife proposal to the parks committee for further study.

The referal was made because of a letter from Allan Murray, assistant deputy minister of the environment ministry, which rejected some of the many conditions the city had attached to the proposal.

Murray said, for instance, that his department could not agree to a restrictive covenant that would ensure that no further pollution or development take place in the upper or lower Thetis Lake watershed.

Murray said that "The provincial government clearly does not have jurisdicition over much of the land in the two watersheds, it therefore could not provide the assurances you request."

Murray added that "It seems that a relatively simple request, as originally envisaged for the betterment of the region as a whole, has been severly set back by a number of side issues."

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who is in full support of the project, said that council had deliberatly sabotaged the project by hanging so many conditions on it that it was bound to sink.

"One of the reasons we put that (pollution covenant) in there was because we knew that government couldn't comply — so that was an easy way out for us.

"The points we put in there were very unfair and virtually impossible to meet."
